NO FORGED PROOF AGAINST COUNTESS, SAYS KELLOG

Washington, Feb. 25 (I.N.S.).—The State Department denied today that Countess Catherine Karolyi, Hungarian noblewoman, had been barred from the United States on the basis of "forged documents," as charged by Senator Wheeler, Democrat, Montana. Wheeler demanded an investigation of Count Lazalo Szechenyi, Hungarian minister, whom he charged with employing detectives to get "false evidence."

STOCK MARKET SETS MORE LOWS

More new lows for the year were registered in the New York stock market today. The closing was fairly steady. Trading was dull in the last hour. Issues off 3 to 4 or more points earlier in the day were Reisenmann, American and Foreign Power, Coca-Cola and Consolidated Gas. Penn. R.R. sold below 51 for the first time this year. Slump in General Electric accompanied the circulation of rumors that directors would not split up the stock at their meeting in Boston tomorrow.

40 COWS, 2 HORSES BURN IN $45,000 BARN FIRE

Brimfield, Feb. 25.—Forty cows and two horses were burned to death and valuable farm property, including a barn famous as a landmark, was destroyed by a fire of spontaneous origin which did damage estimated at $45,000 in West Brimfield. The farm is the property of Robert F. Brass, who discovered the blaze when the barn was enveloped in flames. Palmer firemen arrived too late. Warren firemen were summoned, but did not come.

SACRAMENTO, Calif., Feb. 26.—Sacramento wakes and starts work early. Interested in real things. A New York despatch describes an English nobleman, a Pittsburgh millionaire and others watching a young lady bathing in a tub filled with wine and drinking as they watched. That may have interested New York; it doesn't interest Sacramento. McClatchey of the Sacramento Bee, read by everybody in several counties, dismisses it briefly, "Pigs do the thing better in any pig sty."

IN CHILDHOOD you read about the three blind men examining and misjudging an elephant. One holding the trunk said, "It's a snake." Another, seizing the tail, said, "A rope." A third, feeling one leg, said, "A post."

To expect one man to describe California is like sending a mouse to examine a whale. The mouse might swim around the whale for a week and bring back an inaccurate description. This is a whale of a State; it takes a lifetime to know it.

IN THIS CITY, long ago, lived California's bonanza families, Floods, Huntingtons, Stanfords, Hopkins, Crockers.

Some made their millions in gold, some in railroads, some in banking. Up here navigation on the Sacramento River begins. Here gold hunters came to work at the mother lode in the mountains nearby or wash the nuggets from the running brooks. Here at this day monstrous dredges, modern steel dinosaurs, dig into the rocky flat fields, going down thirty feet and more with their sharp teeth of nickel chrome steel, and bringing up millions of gold that are mixed in small quantities in every cubic yard of soil over vast plains.

THIS WAS the land of wonderful opportunity back in the middle of the last century.

Four local merchants with $75,000 capital planned a great railroad across the continent that has given to them, their descendants and stockholders hundreds of millions.

From these fields and mountains those that came for gold have taken nearly two thousand million dollars.

GREAT WAS the city of Sacramento in its beginning.

A PIRATE of HEARTS

by BEATRICE BURTON
Author of 'Gilded Kisses'

READ THIS FIRST:

SYLVIA STARR, who looks like a flirt but isn't one, is engaged to marry RANDALL PHELPS. One afternoon he phones her at the Boston Public Library, where she works, and tells her to meet him to talk over a matter of great importance to both of them. Sylvia waits for him in the Public Garden for almost an hour before he comes. Then he tells her that he has fallen in love with her best friend, FAY SHIRLEY, and wants to marry her. Dazed, Sylvia wanders around for hours before she goes home to the old house where she lives with her maiden AUNT AGNES, nicknamed AUNT AGONY, who has brought her up.

She tells her the news of the broken engagement and Aunt Agony admits that she has known for weeks that Ranny was calling on Fay, who lives just across the street; and she rejoices that Sylvia isn't going to marry him for, in her opinion, Ranny is weak and good-for-nothing.

She predicts that in a week or two Sylvia will have recovered from her heartbreak about Ranny and will be setting her cap for new suitors, among them PETER WILK.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER II.

THE next morning when Sylvia awakened she felt as if a cloud were hanging over her. She lay with closed eyes for an instant, wondering what made her feel so unhappy and depressed. The whole world seemed as gray as the dull light that sifted in through the shutters of her bedroom.

Then suddenly she remembered.

HUB STRIKE PICKETS IN RIOTING

Pickets of the striking garment workers rioted today in Washington street and Harrison avenue with loyal workers of a dress shop—and this first applause comes in the strike put the strikers very much "in bad" with the police.

After reserves had been rushed from the Lagrange street station, the fight broken up and two warrants for two strikers sworn out, Captain Goodwin of the Lagrange station declared the strikers had tricked him.

He had been told, he declared, that the strike would be called at 10 o'clock and it was called two hours earlier, the inference being, according to the police official, that the strikers wanted to intimidate loyal workers, reporting for work, without danger of police interference.

COPS GUARD WORKERS.

As a result of the battle today, extra details of police will be placed in the strike area, Captain Goodwin declared, and the loyal workers in every shop will be given full police protection.

Police will be stationed in front of every shop and additional police will be posted along the strike thoroughfares and at intersecting streets to give the workers safe conduct. Pickets will not be allowed to saunter or loiter.

To police the terrain thoroughly, Captain Goodwin requested details of reserves from other police stations in the Hub.

The rioting and first trouble of the strike occurred when a striker is alleged to have punched an understrapper, thereby incurring the wrath of the latter's associates.

U. S. SEEKS PEACE.

From in front of the S. Shapiro & Co.'s dress factory, No. 633½ Washington street, where the fracas opened as the workers was entering the shop, his associates chased the assailant to Harrison avenue, where he was trapped and leaped upon angrily.

The mob scattered when police arrived, but two men were recognized by one of the Shapiros, according to the police, and John Doe warrants were procured.

BRAND GIRL WITH FIRE

New Orleans, La., Feb. 25 (I.N.S.).—In the glare of automobile headlights on a lonely road in St. Bernard parish, a New Orleans woman today was attacked by a gang of men, stripped of her clothing and after threats and insults was branded with an iron heated by the flames of candles.

This was the story told police by Mrs. Edith Hauer, twenty-three, after she had been brought back to the city and turned adrift in the streets, clad only in a coat and shoes.

WINE BATH 'TALK' PUTS VERA IN BED VERY BLUE

New York, Feb. 25 (I.N.S.)—Vera, the Countess of Cathcart, is ill—and feeling "very blue."

By telephone from her boudoir in the Hotel Ambassador she complained that unfounded reports about her conduct at Earl Carroll's wine party and bathtub revel had sent her to bed in "great mental distress."

Then, too, there is the prospect that she will have to go back to Ellis Island. Immigration officials who are trying to deport her intimate that the only way the Countess can obtain another hearing in court is to return temporarily to Ellis Island next Wednesday night when her ten days' "shore leave" expires.

The Countess reiterated her denial that she had danced with Harry Thaw at the Carroll party or that she had witnessed anything improper. She left the party early.

But she said she was determined to cheer up. The fog and rain made her homesick for "dear old London," she admitted.

WARN SOMMERS AND MURPHY

New Orleans, La., Feb. 25.—Secretary Jim Price, acting for President Bob Quinn of the Red Sox, today served notice on Pitchers Marty Sommers of Louisville, Jack Murphy of Columbus and Bob Hale of Rockport, Mass., that they would not be tendered contracts until they showed enough stuff to warrant their being retained or at least farmed out to a class A minor league club.

Price stated Quinn does not intend to load his club down with players who are not giving results. Sommers, Murphy and Hale will receive an opportunity to show how good they are when the practice games start next week.

Ideal weather, with the mercury at 74 degrees, greeted the Sox squad today. The sixteen men already in camp engaged in a strenuous workout.

PROSECUTOR WARNED BY LETTER TO CONVICT LECTURER OR BE SHOT

Brockton, Feb. 25.—A second letter threatening death to Attorney Joseph Veracka, assisting in the prosecution of Aron Bimba, alleged blasphemer and Communist, was received by Veracka during the trial today.

The letter was handed over to Judge C. Carroll King and then given to United States Department of Justice agents. Like the first threat of death, it came from Worcester.

Unlike the first threat, however, today's message threatened Veracka if he failed to convict Bimba, putting him in the position of being the object of a death threat from both Bimba's supporters and enemies. Veracka, Bimba and the complainants against the radical editor are all Lithuanians.

Written with ink in a bold hand, the message read:

"Another warning: Remember, attorney, if Bimba is NOT convicted, WE can shoot. Don't be a coward.

"There is a God. What also

GASTON JEWELS LOST IN N. Y. TAXICAB RIDE

Miss Hope Gaston, daughter of William A. Gaston, Boston lawyer, banker and Democratic Party leader, lost $16,700 in jewelry and her handbag today as she was riding from Grand Central Terminal to the Ritz-Carlton Hotel in New York City.

Miss Gaston discovered her loss within five minutes after leaving the taxicab that carried her to the hotel, but efforts to trace the missing handbag and gems were fruitless.

She called upon the police to help her find the valuables as soon as she found that the bag was gone but the taxicab and its driver could not be traced.

Miss Gaston's mother was with her, having accompanied her there from Boston.

The Boston girl is a Vincent Club member and a prominent member of the junior society set here. She made her debut in 1924, and shortly afterward startled society by going into business for herself, opening a millinery shop in Newbury street. Back Bay, with the announced intention of "making Paris hats at lower prices."

Her father, William A. Gaston, was formerly a candidate for Governor and U. S. Senator, barely losing out to the late Senator Lodge in their contest at the time Lodge won his last election to the Senate.

ONE DEFENDANT ABSENT AS RUM CASE RESUMES

Because of an injury sustained in a fall by Eli Weinstein, one of the defendants, the Chelsea rum conspiracy trial in Federal Court was today suspended until 2 o'clock.

A question arose as to whether Weinstein could and would waive his right to be present at the trial and suspension was ordered by Judge Brewster pending a report from Attorney Arthur Harrington, who was sent to Chelsea to consult his client.

Attorney Harrington reported that Weinstein would waive his rights and when the case went on it was without Weinstein being present.

Previously each of the seventeen defendants, including Mayor Lawrence F. Quigley, had been polled by order of the court, and each stated he was willing to waive his rights and go ahead with the trial in the absence of the injured defendant.

News of the accident was received by telephone in the office of U. S.

WITH HAYMAKER OR JAZZ YOUNG COOLIDGE CAN KNOCK 'EM FOR A ROW OF DEMOCRATS!

John Coolidge, son of the President, intends to lick somebody else besides Democrats when he grows up. Here he is giving the boxing dummy the once over in the Amherst College gym where he has just made his debut as a pugilist.

Pity the poor dummy! Here's John all set to mistreat one of the famous Coolidge haymakers. He says he'd rather have a good sock in the right hand than fill his dad's boots as President.

Atta boy, John! Yuh got 'im groggy! Here's close-up of the "White House Hope" in action. If John ever lands that mean looking right there won't be any need of a recount!

Watch 'im, kid! Here's "Matty") Silverman, John's rival in first college bout. Matty gave John a black eye, but you'd ought to see what John gave Matty.

Out of the ring John touts a mean sax. There's a wail in every note that listens like a Democrat losing his job. John ought to be sure of his place on the next G. O. P. bandwagon. (Photos posed especially for Boston Evening American.)

COOLIDGE BOY NOT AFRAID OF 'BLACK EYES'

By JIM DOOLING

Amherst, Feb. 25.—Out of a mauve and muddy eye, jousting John Coolidge, "the White House Wolf," bent a complacent glimpse today and opined that one licking in the squared circle doesn't make a hammer-and-egger, even if it is a boy's first go with the mauling mittens.

A companion dusky optic was borne about as freight by Matthew Silverman of Brooklyn, N. Y., the "Flatbush Flash," that took a mauling measure of the President's son in the 15-chas bouts of the Amherst College boxing tournament at the Pratt Gymnasium.

The boys had met in mutual collision, each stopping the other's handful of knuckles with an eye.

No offers for a battle of the century—either this or any other—deluged the lightweights in the run of today's sun, nor did any word come from Washington and the cavern of cryptic silence sometimes known as the White House.

The President, in the way of Vermonters, was letting his offspring spring as he would in the carving out of his destiny.

John didn't carve much along the line of hauling down Dempsey laurels, but it was his first frolic on the resin and he barely lost on points after giving—and receiving—a beautiful black eye.

"You can tell the world that I have no intention of going out after Dempsey's title," said John today, with a twinkle in his eye.

"On second thought," he added, "you may say that I would rather have a right than be President.

"Every man has to take his beatings at some time or another. I'm not worrying. Matty Silverman is a clever boy. I'm a novice at a punching party, but I'll stick to it until I can do something.

"Say—Silverman has a beautiful left, but his right doesn't amount to much."

Which proved that John has entered into the true spirit of fistcuffs.

Just by way of picking up his training where it was jarred a bit young John went right back into the gym and put on the gloves with "Tug" Kennedy, boxing instructor at the college and former sparring partner of Harry Wills.

Then, when that was over, he slithered back to his room and took up his one and only vice—the saxophone—on which he can play several tunes already.

Young Silverman, conqueror of John, is going to be a lawyer, not a prize fighter, when he quits college, according to his father, Nathaniel Silverman.

The latter today announced he had rejected a proposal from Jack Kearns, erstwhile manager of Jack Dempsey, to guide Matty into a professional ring career.

"I received a telephone message today from Kearns," the elder Silverman said. "He said he would like to manage Matty if my boy desired to turn professional, but I told him there was no prospect of that.

"Matty is a good boxer, but he's going to be a lawyer, not a prizefighter, after he gets through college. If he should happen to meet the President's son again it won't be in the ring, but probably before the bar or in politics, who knows?"

CHELSEA TRIAL GOES ON AFTER BRIEF DELAY

District Attorney Harold P. Williams shortly before the daily session of court began. Weinstein's physician reported that the defendant, who is the father of George Weinstein, also on trial, had fallen in Chelsea last night, pulling ligaments in his leg and sustaining a sprain so serious he would probably be confined to bed for two or three days.

Following a conference in the lobby between Judge Brewster and counsel, court was opened and another conference took place at the bench. Then came the polling of the defendants, after which Judge Brewster informed the jurors of what had occurred.

Ned O'Keefe, alleged bagman for Mayor Quigley, was expected to resume the stand at the resumption of the trial. Following the example of other defendants who have testified in their own behalf, O'Keefe made a general and specific denial of all the charges against him. He said he did not know some of the witnesses who testified that they paid him money.

RULE MARCH 17 IN HUB WOMAN'S $400,000 SUIT

Springfield, Feb. 25 (A.P.)—Judge C. L. Long of Probate Court will make his decision March 17 on whether the will of Mrs. Hannah Barry, widow of Garrett S. Barry, disposing of about $400,000, shall go to a jury on the issue of mental unsoundness. Mrs. Mary A. Magennis of Boston, a niece, is contesting the will on the ground of mental unsoundness and also undue influence by two adopted sons. Attorney W. G. McKechnie said that Mrs. Barry had objected to a charge of $20 for another lawyer drawing her will, but later when a reduction of 25 cents was made she paid the bill without protest.

WRITES MOTHER ABOUT HIS BURIAL, TAPS GAS—FAILS

New York, Feb. 25 (I.N.S.)—Samuel Vermas, 23, a musician, whose mother lives in New Haven, Ct., is recovering in a hospital today after he nearly succeeded in committing suicide in his furnished room, the police said. Vermas wrote a note to his mother asking her to attend to his funeral and then turned on the gas. A caretaker traced the odor and a pulmotor squad rushed to his aid. He would not tell why he tried to kill himself.

COULDN'T KEEP HARRY IN JAIL

Harry Greenwood doesn't like that Waltham jail. He quit it cold.

Some months ago Harry was sentenced to two months in the House of Correction, but the sentence was suspended on condition that Harry pay his wife a certain sum each week. He failed to make the payments and was again in court today, and sentence was imposed. He was placed in a cell in the jail.

A few hours later Harry's father appeared at the station house and questioned Chief McKenna. The chief told him that Harry was in a cell out in back.

"Oh, he isn't in there," said the father. "Harry wouldn't stay in there. He don't like it. He's down to the house packing his bag."

And Harry wasn't there. He had cut his way out with a nail file or something and flitted. He wasn't at the house, either, when the police reached there. They're still looking for him.

day to attempt bringing peace between the employers and the 4,000 strikers.

She is Miss Anna Weinstock, now a Department of Labor representative, and she will meet with the strikers and employers tomorrow.

The strike, according to Julius Heckman, vice-president of the International body of the Ladies' Garment organization, caused a complete tie-up of the industry in Greater Boston within one hour of the walk-out.

Workers were then out in 206 union and 64 non-union shops and a mass meeting for the late afternoon was being arranged for, with President William Green of the A. F. of L. down as the speaker.

Pickets were stationed today throughout the garment-shop district, but their posts were not fixed, they were given instructions by the strike leaders to keep moving, to get into no arguments and to obey the police.

Meanwhile, at strike headquarters in the old Scenic Temple, Berkeley street and Warren avenue, South End, those strikers not on picket duty danced, viewed lantern slides and munched on sandwiches with coffee.

The strike was ordered at a meeting last night and was given the full endorsement of President Green of the American Federation of Labor.

John J. Kearney, president of the Boston Central Labor Union, pledged the support of the local organization.

Shops in the city proper, East Boston, Chelsea, Malden and Melrose are affected.

The strike was ordered to enforce demands rejected by the manufacturers in the city and vicinity, including the adoption of the "Protocols Label" by all manufacturers; the continuation of the five-day 42-hour work week, with minimum wage scales of $1 an hour for every operative, with time and a half for overtime for week workers and $1 an hour overtime pay for piece workers.

200 DEAD IN MEASLES EPIDEMIC IN PALESTINE

Jerusalem, Feb. 25 (I.N.S.).—Two hundred are reported today to have died in an epidemic of measles which is ravaging Hebron, one of the largest cities in Palestine. Efforts of physicians to check the spread of the disease are unavailing and the inhabitants are fleeing from the city in large numbers.

Pimpled Professor Robs Measles of Its Chief Joy

Greenfield, Feb. 25 (A.P.).—Twenty-one schoolboys in the isolation hospital are suffering from measles and a grievance. An instructor is quarantined with them, and classes go on just as if they were all back at school.

An epidemic of measles at Deerfield Academy has resulted in filling the isolation hospital to capacity. One floor of the building was set apart for the use of the boys and their teacher. The cases are all mild.

The sports schedule at the school has been called off until the epidemic is over.

'PAT' SULLIVAN AND BRIDE SAIL

More than a week ago Pat Sullivan, West Newton street garageman, surprised his friends by marrying at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross. He hadn't said much about it, and when friends learn that at midnight tonight he's sailing out of New York in the White Star liner Adriatic for a six-weeks Mediterranean cruise they'll be even more surprised.

But Patrick J. Sullivan and his bride are aboard, and what's more, they'll leave the ship at some European port to continue a journey up through England and Ireland, returning to Boston in the Cedric which leaves Queenstown on May 9.

The Adriatic has 550 aboard and among them are a number from Boston and New England. George W. Howard, first and second cabin manager of the Boston office of the International Mercantile Marine, is going along as tour director. The calls include Madeira, Gibraltar, Algiers, Monaco, Naples, Athens, Haifa, Alexandria and Syracuse. Others aboard include:

RUSSICK WINS FIRST LEG IN N. E. DOG RACE

Wolfeboro, N. H., Feb. 25 (A.P.).—"Shorty" Russick, wearing the colors of H. I. Sutton, Chicago, led a field of eleven drivers home on the first stage of the three-day 148-mile New England point-to-point dog sled race today.

Russick's seven-dog team covered the forty miles between North Conway and Wolfeboro in four hours twenty-three minutes.

Russick, fourth to get away from the starting point at North Conway, overhauled William Greyson, Chicago; Jean Dupuis, Quebec, and Edward P. Clark, Milan.

Some deep snow was encountered on the first ten miles of the course, but after leaving Chocorua Russick said he found the going excellent.

Emile St. Goddard of Poland Spring, Me., made the fastest time to Chocorua, the second station, today.

Chocorua is 23 miles from North Conway.

Francois Dupuis, winner of the international derby in Quebec, last week, had the fastest time for the first seven miles to Conway, which he covered in 40 minutes.

Others in the race are: Edward F. Clark of West Milan, Arthur T. Walden of Wenolauset, Earl Brydges of The Pas, Man., Alfred Skene of Quebec and Francois Dupuis, brother of Jean.

JAILED NURSE IS HELD ON NEW THEFT CHARGES

Mrs. Margaret Watson, a nurse now serving six months at Charles street jail for passing worthless checks, was brought into Roxbury court today and convicted on three counts of larceny by means of worthless checks. The case of the woman, who was also found guilty of defrauding the Hemenway Hotel, was continued to March 13 for further investigation. In the same court Judge Abbott declined jurisdiction in the case of Philip Rothe, 35-year-old Chicago man, and his 18-year-old niece, charged with a statutory offence, and held them for the grand jury. The Department of Justice has warrants for the couple.

TORNADO KILLS 5; LOSS HEAVY

St. Louis, Feb. 25.—All of Indiana and parts of other States were swept by a gale of tornado proportions today that followed torrential rains and caused considerable damage.

In Tennessee three persons were killed and heavy damage was done in Arkansas, where two deaths were reported.

Officials of the United States Weather Bureau said the gales resulted from cyclonic disturbances over a 1,000-mile area, with Grand Rapids, Mich., in the center.

Fifty miles an hour wind swept Indiana-like, impeding traffic, blowing down awnings and signs.

In Greenville, Miss., heavy damage was done, houses being demolished.

Louisville, Ky., reported a sixty-mile-an-hour wind, also from the southwest.

Vernon, Ind., reported a miniature tornado that uprooted houses, tore down chimneys and uprooted trees and poles.

Telephone and telegraph wires were rendered useless by the high, strong winds and communication with many of the smaller places in Indiana was temporarily cut off.

LIZZIE BORDEN CASE WITNESS DIES AT 74

New Bedford, Feb. 25.—A few hours after a serious operation was performed in Union Hospital on Miss Lizzie Borden, leading figure in the famous murder trial of 1893, one of the principal witnesses against her died in the same institution early today.

He was Captain Patrick Connors, for many years connected with the local police department, and died after a long illness, aged 74 years.

Miss Borden's condition is said to be critical, and there is grave doubt as to her recovery.

In August of 1892 Lizzie Borden, then thirty-two years old, was tried and acquitted of the brutal murder of her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew J. Borden, prominent residents of this city. The couple were hacked to death with some sharp instrument, presumably an axe or hatchet.

During the trial Capt. Connors was one of the principal witnesses for the government.

After her acquittal Lizzie Borden lived a lonely, shut-in existence, although possessed of plenty of money, she and her sister Emma having inherited a fortune from their father, who was a bank president.

Capt. Connors was born in Ireland in 1852, coming to this country at an early age. He joined the local police department May 25, 1879, and was retired on a pension February 15, 1923.

POSED AS DIPLOMAT IN WEDDING TWO GIRLS

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 25 (A.P.).—Noel Cobb, alias Dupree, theological student and erstwhile "French diplomat," was back in South Carolina today recuperating at a sanitarium after marital adventures involving six states. Cobb, son of a well-known South Carolina family, attended the Presbyterian Theological Seminary here, then the Vanderbilt University at Nashville, Tenn., where he met Miss Margaret Farmer, Peabody College student, and it is believed a fake marriage ceremony was performed. Later he went to Emory University in Atlanta, and met Virginia Hollingsworth, another southern beauty, whom he married in Chattanooga, Tenn. They returned to the bride's home, where Cobb was taken ill. Letters were found from his supposed first wife, Margaret. Miss Hollingsworth's parents immediately had him arrested on a big-

NO PANTS, NO BASKETBALL---THE ULTIMATUM GIVEN VERMONT HIGH COACH

A visiting girls' team sported the nifty pants on the Springfield basketball floor and then the trouble started.

Hopes of the girls jumped when the coach's absence enabled them to order pants.

Greater freedom for the limbs has added greatly to the success of girl sports, the students argue, and they promise better basketball if they win their point.

The coach is firm in his stand that bloomers must be worn.

PANTS DEMAND TO BE PUSHED BY GIRLS

Springfield, Vt., Feb. 25.—As pants the heart for cooling stream, so still pant the girl basketball players of the local high school for pants.

Not the accepted version of long trousers as worn by the average male, but the running pants effected by athletes, is what is wanted.

The demand arose after a visiting girls' team appeared wearing abbreviated panties, but the local coach discovered a Puritanical streak in his makeup, and put on the soft pedal hard.

During his temporary absence the girls took things into their own hands and placed an order for pants, but the coach returned and the order was cancelled.

Since then the cry for pants has gone up steadily, like a voice crying in the wilderness, with the threat that no pants means no basketball. In view of the fact that modern women have eliminated so much from their costumes, it does seem—oh, well, if they want pants they probably will get pants.

Too Lively

King Victor Emmanuel has disapproved of the gay life his daughter, the former Princess Yolanda, is leading, and plans to transfer Count Calvi, her husband, from Rome to a quiet Venetian town.

ROOSEVELT EXPLORER BACK FROM JUNGLES

While Theodore and Kermit Roosevelt have discovered no River of Doubt in Asia, they will bring out of the jungles strange animals which will cause quite as much excitement in the world as did their father's geographical discovery. This is vouched for by George K. Cherrie, widely known explorer and naturalist, who returned to America on the Dollar liner President Hayes. Mr. Cherrie said that the Roosevelt expedition, of which he was a member, obtained several wonderful specimens of the ovis poli, the sheep of Marco Polo.

'GINGER' IN TUB, SAYS CARROLL; 2 PROBES ON

New York, Feb. 25 (I.N.S.)—Earl Carroll's party, at which guests drank wine from a bathtub in which an undraped model was seated, was under investigation today from two sources.

All facts concerning the party have been ordered brought to him by Police Commissioner George McLaughlin. At the same time it was announced at the Federal prohibition enforcement headquarters that steps would be taken to learn where Carroll obtained the wine.

Carroll insisted today that it was not wine at all—that it was ginger ale. According to the theatrical producer, the party was a model for decorum and sobriety.

As for the guests, they were busy denying they were present, and those who admitted they were there said they left before the girl in the bathtub episode took place.

But—

While Federal knuckles figuratively were rapping at the door of Earl Carroll, the theatrical producer was puffing his blonde hair and avowing to all that it was not he who gave the party at all.

"For I," declared Carroll, "had no liquor at my party on the stage of my theatre. The bath-tub was filled with ginger ale!"

He admitted that there was a ply-bath-tub. He granted the girls of the "Vanities" "were around dancing the Charleston in their bloomers"—their rehearsing clothes, you know—but it was all fun, as Carroll says. Just innocent fun!

No one bathed in the ginger ale. No one would, he appended. And as for drinking—Why outside of the ginger ale there was only two barrels of near beer.

True, his distinguished company—made up of 500 members of New York's "smart set" and including the Countess of Cathcart, Harry K. Thaw, Irvin Cobb, Conde Nast, et al—remained from midnight until the early dawn, but they stayed awake stimulated purely by enthusiasm and not from any alcoholic refreshments.

At prohibition headquarters, however, there was more excitement. Chief Enforcement Agent Tuttle declared that he had sent representatives before Buckner to request a subpoena for Carroll in order to learn "the source" of the liquor supply.

Convict Boy, 12, of Shooting One of 11 in Leg

Worcester, Feb. 25. — The youngest defendant ever to be arraigned in a Worcester court in a shooting case pecked over the rail of the dock today. Leo Fayard of East Worcester street was charged with having fired a rifle bullet through the leg of 11-year-old Antonio Giorgano of No. 38 Larkin street, when the Giorgano boy refused to leave Leo's father's store.

On a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon, Leo, who is 12, was sentenced to the Lyman School, but appealed.

400 MORE ELK ON WAY TO BAY STATE

Middleboro, Feb. 25.—Not until Saturday will the last recalcitrant buck of the 379 wild elk brought from Montana for the Nemasket Range be in his new roaming place, but already a new shipment of more than 400 elk is announced.

The announcement was made today that fourteen elk-filled cars will be brought on from Montana and the little rodeo now being staged, to the edification of the "circus crowd," mostly small boys, gathered in Middleboro, will be duplicated with their arrival.

One-half of the present shipment had been unloaded today, with only one death reported among the elk. This was one animal, shot after breaking its leg.

Because of the long haul from the railroad cars to the range, over torturous, ice-rutted woods roads, the unloading process is slow and officials of the National Elk Breeding and Grazing Association expect that it won't be completed until well into Saturday.

LIQUOR CASE COSTS OLD VEREIN ITS CHARTER

The charter of the Boston Schwaben Verein of No. 194 Heath street, Roxbury, originally granted June 12, 1858, was today revoked by Secretary of State Frederic W. Cook. Secretary Cook declared that his action follows a report from the Boston Licensing Board to the effect that William Dbl, a member of the club, was convicted of keeping and exposing intoxicating liquor in court. ed stove on this floor.

HARD FIGHT AT $1,000 FIRE IN WEST END

Fire caused damage of $1,000 today on the fifth floor of the six-story brick building at No. 347 Cambridge street, West End, giving firemen a battle for an hour and threatening to sweep through the structure and adjoining buildings.

A still alarm was followed by a box alarm. Dense clouds of smoke drove the firemen back several times, but they succeeded in confining the fire to the fifth story, occupied by the Boston Floral Company.

The fire started from an overheat-

COURT FROWNS ON WEEPING BY MARJORIE

New York, Feb. 25 (A.P.).—Marjorie Rambeau, actress, named as correspondent in the suit for divorce brought by Mrs. Mabell Manton, burst into tears during the cross-examination of a witness at the trial, which began today. Supreme Court Justice Wasservogel, presiding, admonished her to refrain from further demonstrations.

Miss Rambeau's breakdown followed testimony by Mrs. Sarah Smith Griggs that a raiding party of which she was a member, last August, had found the actress and William Kevitt Manton together in the bedroom of the actress' suite at the Hotel Endicott. Vigorous cross-examination failed to shake the witness' testimony.

The action is being contested by both Manton and Miss Rambeau. Counsel for Manton said the defence would prove that Manton was in Rambeau's room for "proper reasons." He said Manton was employed as a guest for Miss Rambeau, who at that time was rehearsing for a part in a play in which she later appeared.

Miss Rambeau's counsel contended that Manton was nothing more to the actress than an employe whom she had hired to assist her in the study of her part in the play. She was not concerned, he said, in any way with the quarrel between the Mantons.

R. I. 'LOVE MILL' IS BLAMED BY HER

Mary Heath McGraw Says the Court Was Tricked to Free Her; Will Once Nullified

Providence, Feb. 25.—A huge bale of money—$1,000,000 to say it in round numbers—hung suspended over the lap of beautiful Mary Heath McGraw, former Ziegfeld Follies girl, today as Mary declared the divorce she got herself in Rhode Island to be fraudulent.

Most unusual is it for a woman to charge fraud in a divorce of her own seeking, but the strange instance was brought about through disclosures in the recent "divorce mill" expose and by the fact that the beauty was left the money by McGraw, but his will had been declared nullified by the divorce.

HORTON BLAMED.

Against the Michigan Supreme Court decision in nullification, beautiful Mary is fighting, and today she brought a bill in equity in Superior Court at Providence, looking toward nullification of the divorce.

The former Follies girl sets forth that Leonard W. Horton, former master in chancery in Rhode Island obtained her divorce.

He was convicted last June on a charge of conspiring to defeat justice in connection with the divorce mill and his bill of exceptions will be heard next Wednesday.

HIS KIN FIGHT HER.

Attorney General Charles P. Gerson, when questioned today in the McGraw divorce case, declared he had investigated it and is satisfied that fraud had been committed on the court.

It looks pretty soft for Mary of the Follies.

Should her divorce be declared illegal, the will of McGraw, undoubtedly, will stand and the money will go to the girl-wife.

Contesting the will are a sister and brother of the dead man, Mrs. Elizabeth J. Connery and William H. McGraw, both of Detroit.

JAIL GUARD SENTENCED FOLLOWING DRUNKEN ROW

Worcester, Feb. 25.—Daniel McNamara has been working in the jail business for some time, but today he became a customer. McNamara, a guard at Worcester County Jail, was sentenced to the State Farm as the result of an alleged drunken brawl in the jail, the facts of which are being kept quiet by jail officials. He appealed the sentence in District Court.

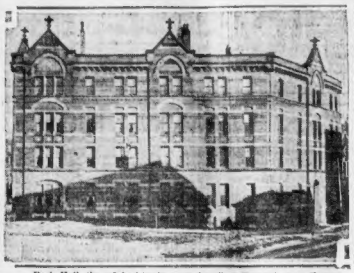
FRESHMAN, LOYAL TO HARVARD TRADITION, SAVES ORIGINAL 'GOLD COAST DORM'

John Jacob Astor, who lost his life on the Titanic, lived at Beck Hall while attending Harvard.

Theodore Roosevelt, II., like his illustrious father, also lodged there.



Beck Hall, the original "gold coast dorm" at Harvard, was threatened by the wrecking crew until Chauncy Stillman, Jr., Harvard freshman, his sentiment of loyalty to tradition aroused, persuaded his father, C. C. Stillman, New York banker, to purchase it.

The hall will be preserved. Junius Spencer Morgan has happy memories of it.

J. P. Morgan, son of the founder of the great international banking house, also resided at Beck Hall, while at Harvard as a student.

Vincent Astor lodged at the dormitory. Chauncy Stillman and his brother occupy the room their father had there in student days.

2 HURT AS 'L' CAR HITS BUS

Two men were injured and more than forty other passengers on an inbound trolley car and bus of the Boston Elevated were endangered in a crash at Boylston and Berkeley streets.

The injured are Louis Lipper, No. 137 Arlington street, South End, and W. C. Hale, No. 107 Massachusetts avenue, Back Bay. Both were cut about the face and body and suffered other injuries when they were hurled against the bus guard rail by the collision.

The trolley was following, inbound from Cypress. It crashed into the bus, smashing all the glass in that vehicle and wrecking the front vestibule of the car.

HISTORIC BECK HALL SAVED BY FRESHMAN

There's a little freshman over in Harvard who probably will never win his "H," but he's done a lot for the college nevertheless.

He's Chauncey C. Stillman, Jr., and he saved Beck Hall.

Beck Hall, the original Gold Coast "dorm," the place where the students of an elite past were served by their valets, was due for destruction. In fact plebeian signs were posted in front of it.

Harvard was moving in quite the other direction, towards the river, and Beck Hall was to be given over to be replaced by an apartment house or a hotel.

Then the little-known freshman's father, C. C. Stillman, New York banker, and brother of James A. Stillman, stepped into the breach. He bought the hall so that young Chauncey and his brother, who is still in prep school, might room in the same hall that their father and many other famous men roomed in.

The annals of Harvard are filled with the great names that were housed in Beck Hall in the days when the "open reception" in the garden in the rear was the crowning event of Boston's social season.

There was John Jacob Astor, who lost his life on the Titanic; Vincent Astor, J. P. Morgan, Junius Morgan and both Theodore Roosevelts.

And the historic building has been saved by a little freshman.

CARVER WARNS OF CHANGE IN IMMIGRATION LAW

The Immigration Act is economically sound in the opinion of Prof. T. N. Carver of Harvard, who denounces proposed amendments that would "break down the law." "The passage of several bills now before Congress would turn the law into a farce," said the head of Harvard department of political economy. "Some provide for freer admission of relatives of people already here. The Immigration Act passed both Houses with overwhelming majorities, and it is doing more to raise the general standard of living than any act placed on our statute books in twenty-five years.

MORE AND BETTER CIGARS SEEN IN TAX REDUCTION

Hartford, Ct., Feb. 25 (A.P.).—More cigars and better ones will be smoked because of reduction in Federal income taxes, Joseph W. Alsop, president of the Connecticut Valley Tobacco Association, said today. The cut in tobacco taxes he figured at $17,000,000 and this would mean, in his opinion, stimulation in the industry just when growers faced an overstocked market with sheds filled with leaf. Mr. Alsop thought a large part of the $17,000,000 would benefit Connecticut Valley [illegible].

TAX SLASH O. K., DECLARES MELLON

Washington, Feb. 23 (I.N.S.).—The tax cut approved by Congress is satisfactory to the administration, Secretary of the Treasury Mellon declared today.

Though the slash exceeded Treasury estimates, Mellon said, prospects for continued prosperity throughout the country are excellent, and he does not look for a deficit unless unexpectedly high appropriations are authorized later by Congress.

The bill will practically wipe out the anticipated surplus for 1927, but there will be a surplus this year to apply to debt reductions, Mellon said. He declared the retroactive estate taxes will have little serious effect on revenues.

Sampson, a civil engineer and formerly in the employ of the New Haven Road, hailed the taxi in Medford square. He was plaintiff in a small claims action and hired Morrow to drive him to the court.

Two physicians happened to be at the courthouse door. They pronounced death due to heart failure and later Medical Examiner Thomas N. Darrell corroborated their findings.

2 GIGANTIC AIR DREADNAUGHTS FOR U. S. NAVY

Admiral Moffett Explains How Helium Protects Them as They Blaze Out Death

Washington, Feb. 25 (A.P.)—Navy plan for great dreadnaughts of the air, bristling with guns to ward off airplane attacks, underlie action of the naval committee in providing for construction of two 6,000,000 cubic foot rigid airships in the $160,000,000 naval expansion program it recently reported to the House.

A glimpse of new monsters that have been designed, given the committee by Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, navy air chief, shows seven of the new 50-caliber machine guns, eighteen 30 caliber and one of the post-war one-pounder automatics, together with 5,700 rounds of ammunition for these weapons, as a part of the regular military load of each ship.

"The guns are so situated that an enemy aircraft cannot approach from any direction or angle without permitting a concentration of fire," Admiral Moffett said.

Instead of armor, the air dreadnaughts will rely on the non-inflammability of helium gas for protection from hostile airplanes. Already, the naval air chief said, introduction of helium had challenged revision of aviation tactics owing to the fact that machine gun fire or small shells cannot set this gas afire and thus send a great ship down in flames.

"The present contemplated but untried tactics of airplanes against helium-inflated rigids call for the former to get above the airship and bomb her with light demolition bombs," Admiral Moffett explained. "A light plane moving at the rate of 150 miles an hour is not conducive to accurate bombing. It takes twenty-eight seconds for a bomb to drop from 13,000 feet. An error of one-half of one degree from vertical of a bomb sight causes an error of over 100 feet in aim. During the period of the bombs fall, if from 13,000 feet, a rigid moves one-half mile on her course.

PETEET CASE LEADS TO CLOSING OF TIJUANA

San Diego, Feb. 24 (A.P.)—Declaring that he was out of patience with what he called unwarranted attacks on his administration of affairs of the northern district of Lower California, Governor Abelardo L. Rodrigues issued a statement at Mexicali today, in which he said he had decided to recommend the closing of Mexicali and Tijuana as ports of entry. They are the principal ports of entry into California from Mexico. Governor Rodriguez's statement is an outgrowth of the Peteet case at Tijuana.

MOTHER GIVES SON TO LAW TO FACE DEATH PENALTY

Houston, Texas, Feb. 25 (A.P.)—Rather than see him a hunted man all of his life, Mrs. Mary Bailey of Houston gave her son, John, seventeen, into custody of the law here, even though he faces trial on a charge for which the extreme penalty is death.

The boy had been a fugitive from justice since January 10, when a seventeen-year-old girl charged him with attack and two other youths with attacking her. The other two were arrested, but John fled to New Orleans. When he returned, his mother surrendered him to authorities.

DRINK WATER TO HELP WASH OUT KIDNEY POISON

If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You, Begin Taking Salts

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which helps to remove the body's waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of good water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they are no longer a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

BACKACHE GONE!

Kidneys doing duty. Bladder function corrected. Pains, aches, aching, stopped. Balmwort Tablets did it, quick too!

"I had backache and agony across my back. At times could hardly get up from my chair. Would be unable to sleep because of bladder irritation. I decided to try Balmwort Tablets —and Say! I never tried any medicine that gave such wonderful relief so quickly. The backache and distress have disappeared and kidneys are acting more normally than in past four years." (Signed) Albert A. Duckworth, Lantier, 33rd St., Market House, Cleveland, O.

Four A 100,000 packages used. Remember! This action of Balmwort is mild—balmy—quick—no money back. Leading druggists everywhere.

BIMBA JOKED AT HIS BELIEF IN GOD, WITNESS TESTIFIES

the rain? What about the snow? What about the air? What about the sun? and many other things?

"He is a fool that hates to live.

Pat Hoffman with them.

"(Signed) L. R. C.

"P. S. Let's have War!"

As the second day of the trial began, an aged colored preacher appeared outside the courthouse and, drawing a Bible from his pocket, conducted a gospel meeting with the crowd of several hundred men and women who were waiting around, hoping for a chance to get inside.

Cries of commendation answered the old negro's plea for reverence of God and they penetrated into the courtroom where Bimba, sitting calmly, was listening to witnesses describe him as an atheist and follower of the red flag of Communism.

Declaring he was "Old Joe Green, a carpenter like Christ himself," the colored man, who is a former Louisiana slave, announced his text.

"God can take away what Bimba cannot give—Life."

He said he went to the courthouse, hoping to see Bimba and convert him.

"You're all right," shouted a man in the crowd.

"I was once a backslider myself," went on Green. "But I've had religion for more than forty years. We owe too much to God to doubt Him and Bimba would not doubt Him if he were not so blind."

After the old preacher began his sermon the police re-enforcements had little difficulty keeping the threat from forcing their way into the corridors of the court house, for with his mannerisms, baring his head every time he spoke of God and quoting liberally from the Bible, he was as much an attraction as the trial.

At the noon recess, surrounded by the crowd, the colored evangelist confronted Bimba, who shook hands, before he knew who the old man was.

"Look here," said the preacher. "What put us here on earth? What put us here?"

"Yes," replied Bimba, "what?"

And he walked away.

Witnesses at the trial admitted under cross-examination that much of Bimba's talk of overthrowing government referred to Lithuania, but insisted that he urged organization of a Communist party for that end in America.

The trial was delayed because of objections on the part of both prosecution and defense to the court interpreter, and a new one was assigned. He is Vincent Ambrose of Boston. Defense objections were based on a careful check-up of the translations of testimony by Bimba's wife.

TESTIMONY BEGINS.

The accused radical editor and his wife were the center of an admiring crowd as they pushed their way through the gathered throng into the courthouse, many sympathizers from other New England mill cities, as well as from their home city, Brooklyn, N. Y., being among the crowd.

John Bolonis, a shoeworker living in the Montello district of Brockton, was cross-examined by Defence Counsel Hoffman through the interpreter.

Q.—Did you ever make a speech against God? A.—No.

Q.—Did you not give a lecture on God and the church at a hall in Ames street? A.—We held only a discussion, not a lecture.

Q.—You didn't argue against God and church? A.—No.

DENIES BEING I. W. W.

Q.—Didn't you give a lecture against God and the church in Lithuanian Hall, Montello? A.—Yes, we held a discussion.

Q.—And did you not support the contention that there is no God? A.—No, I upheld the contention that people misconstrued the meaning of God.

Q.—Isn't it a fact you were an I. W. W. leader of a strike at the Cross shoe factory? A.—That's a pure lie!

Q.—Did you not march in a May Day parade in Brockton in 1916 and carry a red flag? A.—That's a lie, too. I participated in the parade but I did not carry a red flag. There was no red flag in that parade.

HEARD REVOLT PLAN.

Bolonis said he was not a member of the Socialist party, but was connected with the Lithuanian section of that party.

Q.—Did Bimba say the people should get together and overthrow the American government by violence? A.—Yes, he said we should organize into a Communist party.

Q.—Do you want to leave it that way? A.—Yes, he agitated for the people to organize.

Q.—Did you hear Bimba say Lithuanian workers were bringing Bolonis said he himself has taken by the use of moonshine? A.—No.

Q.—Were you offended because Bimba said there was no God? A.—No, I was not.

Q.—What impression did you have when you left the hall? A.—I came away with the impression that Bimba had denied God and given some scientific reasons on the pros and cons. He said there was no way to prove there is a God and that science was mixed up about it.

Q.—You did not get the idea that they were going out and overthrow the government by force? A.—No, I didn't think anything like that was possible. I only thought he was exploiting the people as the priests exploit them.

Q.—Then you believe the priests exploit the people? A.—I certainly do.

He said Bimba told the difference between the Socialist Party and the Communist Party, explaining that the former believed in revolution by the ballot, the latter by force. Hodoni said he himself has taken out his first citizenship papers and served in the army.

Bolonis was asked by City Prosecutor Rubin in redirect examination: What did Bimba say regarding joining the Lithuanian Literary Society here? A.—He said the Lithuanians would be organized the same as all other nationalities to get together to overthrow the government.

Q.—At what time was this overthrow to take place? A.—In the very near future.

Q.—You plainly got the impression then that Bimba intended to overthrow the government? A.—I got the feeling he was trying to organize the people to overthrow the government and start a flowing of blood.

DENOUNCES ALL CLERGY.

Joseph Trainovics, the next witness, quoted Bimba as saying: "Pope, cardinals, bishops and priests are all monarchists, though they say they are democrats for the people. Just look what they're doing in Lithuania. The Clericals, Nationalists and Socialists own the government there and they are torturing innocent people.

"They catch people and put them in jail. They say there is a God in the clouds, tell the people to pray and say there is a soul in the human body, but the only sole is in the shoe."

He corroborated much of the testimony as to Bimba's utterances as given by preceding witnesses. Trainovics is one of the two who filed the complaint against the radical lecturer.

DISBELIEVED BIMBA.

Attorney Hoffman, cross-examining Trainovics, asked: Didn't Bimba say there was too much liquor being drunk in Brockton, and that as a result the foreign workers were suffering? A.—Something like that.

Q.—Now, when he advised joining the Lithuanian Educational and Literary Society, didn't he say to do so in order that children of the workers should become better educated and have a better opportunity? A.—I don't recall it that way.

Q.—When he spoke, as you say, of using the sword, did he not refer to the Lithuanian government? A.—Yes.

Q.—When he spoke of the American government did he speak of using the sword? A.—No.

Q.—Didn't he read a letter about conditions in Lithuania? A.—Yes.

Q.—And showed a picture of a girl crazed by treatment there? A.—Yes, but I didn't believe him. I knew conditions there were all right because I had a letter from there.

STILL HIS FRIEND.

Q.—And when he spoke about workers revolting instead of using the ballot to alter things, did he not refer to Lithuania where, he said, workers were arrested on the eve of an election and thus found themselves unable to use the ballot? A.—Yes.

Q.—When he spoke of organizing the Jews, the Poles, the Lithuanians and Russians, didn't he refer to Lithuania, where all those different nationalities are found, and say they were organizing to overthrow the Clerical Party? A.—Yes, but when he mentioned overthrowing the American government he spoke again of organizing the nationalities.

Q.—Did you say to a man named Lacosius last night that the only way you could put across the case against Bimba was to show he said the American government must be overthrown? A.—No; if he said that he is lying.

The witness caused a laugh when he said all men were his friends and that Bimba was his friend and brother.

SIGNED WITHOUT READING.

Q.—Then why did you go to the police station about the Bimba case? A.—I got a telephone call to go there.

Q.—Whom did you find there? A.—Eudavo.

Q.—Did he tell you that because you were a Roman Catholic and a church member you should swear out the complaint referring to Bimba's denial of God, while he would swear out the part about overthrowing the government? A.—No.

Q.—Did you read it before you signed it? A.—No.

Q.—Did you know what was in it? A.—No.

Q.—Yet you took an oath and signed it? A.—Yes, because I believed the clerk when he said it was a complaint against Bimba.

Questioned again by the prosecuting attorney, the witness said he stood up in the meeting, at which Bimba was lecturing, and declared that he believed in God.

"Bimba made a joke of it," said Trainovics. "He said, 'There's one who still believes in God.' I was insulted."

"Did you understand the complaint?" asked Attorney Hoffman.

A.—Yes, I did.

Frank Alusow, called as a witness, repeated the story of Bimba's denial of God and talk of overthrowing the government.

Bimba acts and looks like a book worm. He is tremendously serious for as young a man. He seems to have the weight of humanity on his shoulders, judging from his solemn expression at times. He

He seems the born agitator. He is tall and athletic is build, standing six feet. He has deep set eyes and features more conspicuous for their strength than for charm. He parts his thick dark hair well over on the left side. His heavy rimmed tortoise glasses give him the appearance of a college senior.

BOSTON FOLK TO SAIL FOR EUROPE TOMORROW

James J. Phelan, president of Hornblower & Weeks, will be among the 825 passengers sailing out of New York tomorrow for Cherbourg and Southampton aboard the White Star liner Olympic. Mr. Phelan is going on a combined business and pleasure trip. There are several other Bostonians booked on the ship, as well as a number of distinguished foreigners. Others from Boston include: Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Fay and Frank J. Fay, Jr.; Mr. and Mrs. George L. Foote, Maxwell Norman, Mr. and Mrs. L. Tyler Pratt, Mrs. Quincy A. Shaw, second, Mr. and Mrs. Windsor Weld and Miss Dorothea Weld. Sir Eric Geddes is among those sailing.

BOY BURNED BY ACID WHEN JAR BREAKS

John J. Brassill, fourteen-year-old son of Assistant Deputy Warden Thomas E. Brassill of the State Prison, was severely burned with sulphuric acid today when he dropped a jar on Park street, Charlestown. The jar was contained in a crate that had fallen from a hose wagon of the Boston Fire Department. The boy dropped the jar and its contents spattered burning his face severely. He was taken to Haymarket Relief Hospital.

WOMAN SENTENCED IN STOLEN GOODS CASE

Mrs. Mildred C. McGregor, twenty-four years old, of Prospect street, Somerville, was sentenced to six months in the House of Correction by Judge M. E. Sturtevant in Somerville District Court today for receiving stolen property. She appealed and was held in $1,000. Edward J. Devereaux, arraigned with the woman on similar charges, was held for the Grand Jury, and Daniel McGregor of Austin street, Cambridge, was found not guilty. The property was alleged to have been stolen from the garage of J. Frank Wilson of No. 15 Summit avenue, Somerville.

Preacher Fails to "Convert" Bimba

An aged negro preacher, "Old Joe" Green—a carpenter, like Christ himself—was a rival attraction to the Bimba trial outside Brockton courthouse today.

"Old Joe" announced his text as, "God can take away what Bimba cannot give—Life."

He declared he had come to convert Bimba, and his remarks pleased the big crowd that was unable to get into the trial. Bimba, however, ignored the preacher when he attempted the conversion during noon recess.

What Paris Told Me

About the latest aids to beauty

By Edna Wallace Hopper

Returning from Paris on S. S. Homeric, August, 1925.—Photo by Bain.

New York, N. Y., Feb. 22.—At State Theatre, Boston, next week, I hope to see many who remember me as a stage star of former years. In the early nineties I made my great success in "The Girl I Left Behind Me." Some of you remember me in old musical comedies—"Wang," "Dr. Syntax," "El Capitan," etc. Also my sensational triumphs in "La Belle Helene," and as Lady Holyrood in "Floradora." Then as co-star with America's most popular actor, George M. Cohan.

Last summer I made my 34th trip to France. I spent my vacation in Paris. For 40 years I have been going there, first in quest of beauty, then of youth. To her scientists I largely owe my glorious career. Their aids still keep me looking like a girl.

Paris is the home of youth and beauty. There nearly all girls are fascinating, and nearly all women look young. Just because French experts have so devoted themselves to this subject. The best helps they use are today at your call in Edna Wallace Hopper's toilet aids.

My Facial Youth

One great help Paris gave me years ago is a matchless liquid cleanser. It contains no animal, no vegetable fat. It will not grow hair. It cannot assimilate in any way with the skin. It simply cleans to the depths, then departs. All the grime, dead skin and clogging matter depart with it.

It seems all French beauty experts employ and advise that cleanser. All fashionable women appear to use it. That cleanser is known in America as Edna Wallace Hopper's Acid Youth. Your toilet counter has it. Try it and learn what a clean skin really means. You will never again go without it.

My Youth Cream

My Youth Cream embodies several helps which French experts employ. Some I have used since girlhood, some are more recent aids. These include products of both lemon and strawberry. Also all the best that science knows to nourish, feed and protect the skin. It does the utmost cream can do.

My Youth Cream comes in two types—cold cream and vanishing. I use one at bedtime, one in the morning. Never is my skin without it. Now it is bringing to thousands of women what it brought to me. Certainly every woman should employ this super cream.

White Youth Clay

Paris is using Clay as never before. French beauties have used it for centuries. But the new-type Clay is not crude and muddy like the old types. It is white, refined and dainty. It combines two clays to get maximum effects. Also other helpful factors.

I supply this new type as Edna Wallace Hopper's White Youth Clay. I wish every girl and woman would see what a quick, amazing change it brings. The results are now seen in every circle, in new beauty and new youth.

Youth Clay purges the skin of all that clogs and mars it. It draws out the cause of blackheads and blemishes. It combats all lines and wrinkles. It brings the blood to the skin, so every user gains a rosy afterglow. To girls it brings multiplied beauty. And many women in 30 minutes look ten years younger.

My Hair Youth

My hair is my greatest glory. It is thick and lustrous, far more luxuriant than 40 years ago. I have never had falling hair or dandruff, never a touch of gray. That I owe to a remarkable formula French experts gave to me. It is supplied at toilet counters as Edna Wallace Hopper's Hair Youth.

Hair Youth combines several great helps in one. It is highly concentrated, so a little goes far. I apply it with an eye-dropper directly to the scalp—just enough to dampen the scalp. There it combats the hardened oil and dandruff which stifle the hair roots. It tones and stimulates the scalp. Such things must be done—done daily—if you want your hair to flourish as his mine.

My Hair Youth costs 50c and $1 with eyedropper You can feel it act. In a very short time the results will delight you.

My Fruity Shampoo

I have fluffy bobbed hair, and I believe in it. Millions of women who see it, on the stage and in society, envy its marvelous beauty.

But there is only one way I know to get that glint, that lustre. It is due to a marvelous shampoo.

I cannot tell you why. The great factors in this shampoo are concealed from me. The makers claim them as discoveries which they desire to control.

But now I have induced them to make for you the very shampoo they make for me. It is called Edna Wallace Hopper's Fruity Shampoo. You can obtain it now for 60 cents.

I know it to be, after world-wide search, the greatest shampoo in the world. I guarantee it. Compare it with any shampoo you know, and your dealer will return your money if you are not delighted beyond measure.

Won't you do this for your own sake? Go learn what it means to you.

About Tooth Paste

My teeth are marvelous—pearly and perfect. They form one of my greatest beauty factors. Yet, in my nomadic life, they get little dental care.

The reason lies in the fact that, for years and years, I devoted 30 minutes a day to my teeth. I used several tooth pastes. Then a mouth wash. Then I used Milk of Magnesia. I used all that the leading dentists told me to employ.

But now all these essentials are embodied in a single application. A new type dentifrice has been created. The name is Quindent, meaning five in one. It combines cleaners and polishers, four antacids, four antiseptics, iodine and breath deodorants. All that my advisers have always urged me to employ.

So now I use Quindent only. It does all I did with numerous applications, and in the utmost way that modern science knows.

There is no question, I believe, that Quindent is the greatest modern dentifrice. Some 50 great chemists have collaborated on it. It takes the place of all I used before. I advise Quindent to every lover of beauty, to everyone who seeks healthy gums and white, sound, glistening teeth. The leading authorities know pronounce it a perfect creation. It costs 50c.

My Powders

We on the stage are careful of our powders. I used to pay $5 per box for mine. Now by having them made in vast quantities I supply the best powders I ever found at 50c and $1 per box.

There are two types. I use a heavy cold cream powder which clings and stays. It is called my Youth Cream Powder. But I also supply it light and fluffy, without the cold cream base. Both come in three shades—white, flesh and brunette.

The coupon will bring you a trial size of any of my best beauty helps. Also the best advice that science has given me on every form of beauty aid. Clip coupon below. Find out how much these supreme helps mean to girls and women.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Moscow Art Players Here Next Week to Be Much Entertained Set

A PATRON - PATRONESS list of imposingly important length on the one hand and a luncheon-reception at the Women's Republican Club on the other are prominent elements presupposing a vast social success for the stay in town (of one week only) of those much-heralded, much-anticipated Moscow Art Theatre players.

TO GIVE THE soberous high sounding title in toto, it is the Moscow Art Theatre Musical Studio which comes to town and takes possession of the Boston Opera House for the week of March 8, after a whirlwind Metropolitan success that has all Gotham talking.

MORE THAN SIX score influential names of persons of social, financial, educational, artistic and official importance grace the list of sponsors and for the opening night the Opera House will without doubt take on the glowing effulgence of Grand Opera's short season.

NO OPENING which lacks high official sanction is quite complete these days, and the fact that His Excellency, the Governor and Mrs. Fuller will have places on that evening, adds lustre to the prospect. M. Sergei Koussevitsky and Madame Koussevitsky are prospective guests.

ALSO THE PRESIDENTS of those nearby seats of learning, Wellesley College and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. In all probability Otto Kahn, New York financier and staunch supporter of affairs artistic, will come to town for the opening.

OF COURSE that dynamic personage of the stage in its higher manifestations, Morris Gest, will be on hand to witness the Tagakans' Boston premiere. Also Oliver Saylor and John Cheney, both closely identified with the Muscovites' triumphs.

ADD TO THE SOCIAL aura surrounding the opening, that to intensified by the Women's Republican Club hospitality on March 5, at which Mrs. Philip L. Saltonstall (herself a playwright of ever increasing fame) will be presiding genius.

THE ENTIRE COMPANY of Russians will be guests and, naturally, there'll be a rush to meet this galaxy of stars for one of its last appearances before returning to its native Russia.

PRAISE AND congratulations in no uncertain measure follow the athletic progress of certain Bostonians now gracing tennis courts in the Sunny South. Latest advices from Palm Beach give to the Richard Harlees and to Miss Elizabeth Choate (properly speaking, the latter comes from Southboro) high tennis laurels.

THE HARLEES have to their credit a mixed doubles championship of that distinctly smart organization, the Everglades Club, with Miss Choate not in the winning class but playing brilliant tennis, nevertheless. Mrs. Harlee was Mabel Webster, a daughter of the Edwin Sibley Websters.

MISS CHOATE belongs to the Charles F. Choate family of Southboro, which is, during the Winter season, a leading unit in Palm Beach's more exclusive residential set wherein the Board mans, the Amorys, the Welshs and the Ahls take foremost if unspectacular place.

ON NEARBY COURTS local stars furnish much sport, such as one expects when Mesdames J. Lewis Bremer, William Endicott and Huntington R. Hardwick meet, Miss Virginia Oakes, Miss Hilda Williams, Miss Margaret Blake, Miss Ruth Thayer and Miss Rosamond Newton also shine.

THE MATCHES go on today at the covered courts of the Longwood Cricket Club in a doubles tournament for feminine wielders of the racquet, and results will be watched with much interest hereabouts.

MISS FRANCESCA and Miss Jacqueline Braggiotti were exactly like figures from a Fragonard tapestry in their white satins and gold laces at the French Court Period, when they danced at the Repertory Theatre's ten.

THE ORIGINAL creation was called "Romance" on the cards and was directly in contrast to their other offering, when in peasant costume of primitive color and design they did another original contribution, the "Reapers."

REPERTORY THEATRE CLUB activities are quite unending and give more than a fillip of interest doth aesthetic and homespun to the waning Winter season. There's a Rummage Sale for one thing, that always sure money-getter (however does the unending supply of "rummage" come from?)

Owners of Broadcast Station WNAC, Boston

Tonight will witness the second anniversary of the opening of WBZ's Hotel Brunswick studio in Boston. A well varied program has been arranged.

BOSTON RADIO AMERICAN

VOICING THE GREAT DEMOCRACY OF THE AIR

SAMUEL CURTIS, JR., Radio Editor

At 9:00 o'clock WNAC is presenting the first episode of the radio mystery play, "A Step on the Stairs." At 6:48 P. M. the WEEI Big Brother Dramatic Club presents "The Scratch."

WBZ TO HOLD ANNIVERSARY

Leading stage celebrities appearing in "No, No, Nanette," "Naughty Riquette," "The Judge's Husband," Repertory Theatre, and "Is Zat So," State and city officials and prominent business and newspaper men of Boston will contribute to the gala program celebrating the second anniversary of the opening of the Boston studio of Westinghouse station WBZ in the Hotel Brunswick tonight.

Addresses will be given by Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols, L. C. Irlan, president of the Brunswick and Lenox hotels; George H. Cox, manager Westinghouse company in New England, and others.

WNAC OPERATOR BALKS AT SONG

Irving B. Robinson, chief operator at the Shepard station, threatens to go on strike unless they stop playing the "Prisoners Song."

Robinson's work keeps him confined for hours at a time in a little room on the eighth floor of the Tremont street store at Shepard's, where the transmitting apparatus is located. He claims that he can stand practically any kind of music, having been connected with broadcasting for so long.

But this "Prisoners Song" has Rob by a bit buffaloed.

He says it has a depressing effect upon him.

Major John J. Fanning, studio director at WNAC, on the other hand, says he doesn't know what he can do about the matter. Requests are coming in by the hundred to play the "Prisoners Song."

In the meantime Robinson is thinking of appealing to the radio audience for advice.

Placement of Speaker

The position of a loud speaker in a room is very important, especially to get the proper acoustical effect of the instrument. While the cone type speaker possesses no directional effects, it can be placed almost anywhere is a room, but the horn is best placed at an ordinary table level. Corners are excellent places for horn producers because they spread the music out across a room without generating troublesome echoes. It is wise to try out the speaker in different parts of the room to see how it works.

A Tip on Soldering

When soldering a lug to wire, run the wire up through the hole of the lug, then bend it over about one-eighth of an inch. Press the end of the wire into as close contact with the lug as possible, using the end of the soldering iron, then apply a drop of solder. The plan is to get the lug and wire into as close contact as possible so that there will only be a film of solder between them.

Radio Queries

Q.—J. F. H., Somerville. About a year ago we bought a three-circuit set, having three tubes, and operating on dry cell batteries. The set uses 67½ volts of B batteries. For the past two months the set has been acting very queerly. We will be tuned in on WNAC or WEEI and suddenly it will fade right out. In a moment or two it comes right back again, sometimes louder than before. Can you make any suggestions? Have bought three new WD-12 tubes, and all A and B batteries are brand new.

A.—I suspect your trouble is in the antenna. If your antenna is outside and has been up for a year, it is more than likely that something has corroded. Another probable cause of trouble is the lightning arrester. Certain types of arresters become filled up with snow and water, which partly grounds the whole antenna system. Check over your ground connection.

Q.—M. L. J., Rockport, Mass. I have a Radiola Superheterodyne, using six UV-199 tubes. This set has given me very good service except for one thing. I notice that when I first put new dry cells in it works very fine for about three weeks and then the tone quality begins to get ragged. I have noticed this on several sets of batteries. Do you think it is the set, the tubes or the batteries which are to blame? My tubes all test OK, and have been matched for this particular set. My B batteries are both new, as is the C battery. Please answer in your Radio Queries.

A.—Your trouble apparently is due to the fact that the operating characteristics of the dry sell is one involving a gradual decrease in voltage according to the number of hours in use. After your batteries have been used for three weeks their voltage drops and their internal resistance increases. This condition naturally makes itself felt in the delicate UV-199 tube filaments, and a resultant difference in tone quality results. You can overcome this condition by connecting more cells in parallel, or else by using a 4 volt storage battery in place of dry cells.

BIG BROTHER CLUB TO PRESENT PLAYLET

This evening the Big Brother Dramatic Club of WEEI presents the dramatic playlet, "The Scratch," an original radario in four acts.

The scene of action is laid in a courtroom, and the plot of the story revolves around a scratch on a automobile door, and the moral of the story is the value of close attention to details.

MYSTERY PLAY WNAC FEATURE

Groans, squeals and sepulchral voices from the tomb—not all related to the Hooper family—are some of the effects to be heard from the loud speaker in the course of this broadcast of the new radio mystery story by Robert J. Casey, called "A Step on the Stairs," New England rights to broadcast this weird story, written especially for radio transmission have been granted to Stations WNAC and WEAN. The Shepard Stores, Boston and Providence, and will go on the air tonight at 9 o'clock.

According to John Shepard 3rd, executive in charge of WNAC, this story is making a big stire in the radio world because of its peculiar effects. The author is a master of radio technique as well as a successful writer, and he has originated a new style of writing which corresponds to the special story and scenario writing developed by the movies. The play is being broadcast in fifteen of the leading broadcast stations throughout the country.

VICTOREEN IDEA WORKS WELL

Many radio experimenters who have built superheterodyne receivers, are still wondering what this controversy regarding "Air cores versus Iron cores" is all about.

Some manufacturers of superheterodyne transformers specify in their circulars that "Our transformers have iron cores." Others take equal pride in stating that their transformers have no iron in them." The inexperienced fan, who probably has had no training which would allow him to intelligently comment on the matter, is nine times out ten left unconvinced over the merits of either.

It is only fair to say, that until quite recently little attention was had with air core superheterodyne transformers. The great difficulty seemed to be in building them so that amplification could be obtained without spoiling the reproductive quality. Another great problem was for a manufacturer to build them in quantity, and have them all matched.

In the Victoreen Superheterodyne circuit air core transformers are used throughout. The only place where iron cores are used, is in the audio transformers—and here they are naturally quite necessary. The Victoreen transformers are individually tuned to 3400 meters, a frequency which has been found to be noticeably free from harmonics and noises.

The use of air core tuned transformers gives a noticeable increase in selectivity, and many experimenters claim phenomenal results in tuning through local stations.

The Victoreen transformers are individually tuned with small condensers.

DINNER TO C. H. INNES TO BE BROADCAST

Tonight at 8:45 station WNAB, the Shepard Stores, will broadcast on 256 meters, the dinner at the Algonquin Club, which is being tendered to Charles H. Innes. An impressive list of speakers is to appear under the toastmastership of ex-Governor Channing Cox.

Walter Johnson's orchestra furnishes the musical program and this is followed by speeches by Judge John C. Crosley, Judge Nelson J. Brown, Lieutenant-Governor Allen, Mayor Nichols, Hon. John A. Sullivan and Mr. Innes.

DX CONDITIONS LAST NIGHT

By "THE DOCTOR"

It was an average night. The static was not very heavy, neither did the atmosphere seem very conductive.

My best outside station was WIOD at Miami Beach, Fla., who was tuned in slightly above WBZA's wavelength. WJZ's signals did not seem to be as loud as usual last night.

Local reception was excellent.

RUM INFORMER TO GO FREE

Probation for Lawrence Lavan, who turned State's evidence against the alleged Cambridge auto ring, so he might get his auto license back, was recommended in Middlesex Superior court today by Assistant District Attorney Robert Bushnell.

Lavan was charged with malicious injury to two automobiles in connection with an escapade of the alleged auto ring, and Judge Stone gave him probation that Bushnell recommended.

On a charge of violating the automobile laws, Lavan, who lives at No. 181 Shirley avenue, Revere, was fined $100.

The auto ring cases were completed with Lavan's testimony carrying much weight against the men declared to be his companions.

THE THEATRE Here and There

Young Miss Hopper
Opera vs. Films
Poetry Matinee
Here's Another Foy

—By NICHOLAS YOUNG—

THAT perennial flapper, Edna Wallace Hopper, will move upon the local scene next week to display her maidenly charms from the stage at Loew's State and incidentally explain how to be 52 years old and look like nineteen. There is little doubt that Miss Hopper will be held in close attention.

PLASTIC surgery has kept Miss Hopper young and beautiful, though it must be admitted that the surgery had a pretty fair subject to practice upon. Miss Hopper's act, it is understood, is about half entertainment and half promotion for this new plan of erasing wrinkles. For those who aspire to newly acquired charms, the business side of Miss Hopper's visit will probably be accepted as the best part of the show.

GRAND OPERA NEXT

THIS new Metropolitan Theatre is going to break right out with grand opera in its next bill. By means of Frank Gambria's "Great Moments from Grand Opera," there will be a mixing of films with the classics. A group of noted operatic singers will present this feature, which will consist of snatches of songs from the most popular operas. An elaborate stage setting will form the background for the number. Among the works to be heard will be the prayer scene from "Cavalleria Rusticana," the "Miserere" from "Il Trovatore" and the prison scene from "Faust."

A POETRY matinee is promised for Friday, March 12, at the Repertory Theatre. The affair is to be conducted by the Repertory Theatre Fund management. Edward Davison, a young English poet now visiting in this country; Leonora Speyer, winner of the 1925 Poetry Prize, and Joseph Auslander, author of "Sunrise Trumpets," will read from their own newest works.

JUST ANOTHER FOY

THE Foys always are with us. For a generation Eddie Foy chased laughs, laughs and loud guffaws through the theatres of the land and before he retired he had raised such a family of little Foys that an entire show was set up by the family and presented successfully in vaudeville. One of the leading lights among the juvenile Foys was Charlie Foy, now as big as his famous dad and just as funny.

CHARLIE was the second son; also he was more like his father in poise and manner than any of his brothers. With Eddie retired, Charlie just naturally stepped into daddy's shoes and carried his wares to the public through the vaudeville stage. He is making his first Boston appearance at the Orpheum, giving imitations of his father.

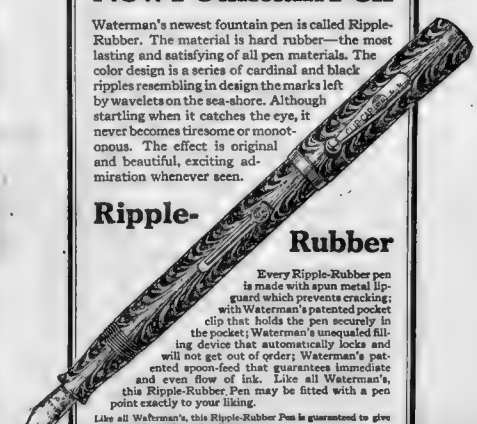
A Startling and Attractive New Fountain Pen

Waterman's newest fountain pen is called Ripple-Rubber. The material is hard rubber—the most lasting and satisfying of all pen materials. The color design is a series of cardinal and black ripples resembling in design the marks left by wavelets on the sea-shore. Although startling when it catches the eye, it never becomes tiresome or monotonous. The effect is original and beautiful, exciting admiration whenever seen.



Ripple-Rubber

Every Ripple-Rubber pen is made with spun metal lip-guard which prevents cracking; with Waterman's patented pocket clip that holds the pen securely in the pocket; Waterman's unequaled filling device that automatically locks and will not get out of order; Waterman's patented spoon-feed that guarantees immediate and even flow of ink. Like all Waterman's, this Ripple-Rubber Pen may be fitted with a pen point exactly to your liking.

Like all Waterman's, this Ripple-Rubber Pen is guaranteed to give perfect service without time limit.

Sore throats need this Double-Treatment

YOUR sore, ... throat probably needs the soothing, healing vapors that arise from Vicks VapoRub when it is rubbed over throat and chest at bedtime. And Vicks acts two ways at once:

(1) It is vaporized by the body heat and inhaled right to the inflamed air passages, loosening the phlegm and easing the difficult breathing;

(2) At the same time it warms and stimulates the skin like an old-fashioned poultice, "drawing out" the pain and soreness and thus helps the vapors inhaled to relieve the congestion.

Good for the colds of all the family.

PHILLIPS' Milk of Magnesia

Instead of soda hereafter take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

BETTER THAN SODA

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. Besides, it neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges this souring waste from the system without purging. It is far more pleasant to take than soda.

A PIRATE of HEARTS

By BEATRICE BURTON
Author of "GILDED KISSES"

The Love Story of a Boston Girl Who Wants Only One Man---and the Husband Who Strayed

Danny had jilted her, thrown her down—Danny, whose engagement ring still circled the third finger of her left hand.

She held it up and looked at it, twinkling and winking at her like a star in the half-light. With a pang she remembered how Danny had kissed it when he put it on her finger last Thanksgiving night.

"Will you love me forever and ever, dear?" he had asked her solemnly and just as solemnly she had promised that she would.

Now she was sure of him then. She had been so sure of him all along, right up until last night after midnight. So until she had been in the presence of Ted Ellis Pardee there had been what was going on right under her nose. She hadn't seen that it was a regular love affair between Danny and that—and fallen out of love with him.

The door of the room opened and she heard Aunt Agony's long, quiet step. Still one lynx eye appeared in the crack.

Aunt Agony whispered.

Sylvia shook her head in reply. "No, I'm awake," she answered, evenly.

Mrs. Shirley's on the phone. What shall I tell her?" Aunt Agony stood opening the door wide and stepping into the room. "You don't want to talk to her, do you?"

Sylvia Hopeless

Sylvia shook her head once more. "No—tell her I have a sore throat and am staying in bed this morning," she said. It was the truth, as far as that went. For Sylvia's throat really was sore and it ached, and her head ached with the cold she had caught yesterday waiting for Danny.

"Poor Miss Hope, too, will you please, Aunt Agony?" she added a second later as her aunt started down the stairs. "And tell her I'll be down to come down to the library today."

She felt that she just couldn't face Miss Hope today after what she had told her yesterday, that she was going to be married in June.

"Oh, misery!" she groaned to herself as she got slowly and painfully out of bed a few minutes later and went into the bathroom to turn on the hot water in the tub.

While it was filling she cleaned Danny's ring with an old toothbrush dipped in alcohol and packed it neatly away in a little pasteboard box.

When Sylvia, fresh and fragrant and starched from her bath, went down to breakfast, she found her aunt buried in the morning paper. She was so intent upon whatever she was reading that she did not hear her niece come into the room.

Sylvia stood in the doorway, looking around her at the familiar old room with its wood fire and the high narrow windows.

For all their lack of riches they lived well, these two lone women Aunt Agony was a famous housekeeper and she could make a dollar go a very long way.

"Her motto" cried Sylvia as she sat down and lifted the napkin from her plate. "How nice!" She knew that Aunt Agony had made them especially for her.

Aunt Agony jumped. "Heavens to Betsy, child! I didn't hear you come in!" She ducked her gray head into the paper again.

Sylvia broke off a piece of the fluffy roll and buttered it. Then she looked at it and shuddered. She wondered if she would ever feel like eating again.

Another Blow

She forced herself to eat all of the roll and to drink a cup of coffee.

"Listen to this," Aunt Agony said, raising the paper and holding it in front of her like a shield. "Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Shirley of Jay street announce the engagement of their daughter, Fay, to Mr. Hubert Pierce. The wedding will occur in the event of early June."

She lowered the paper and looked across the table at Sylvia's white face and lowered eyelids. "Well they aren't wasting any time, are they?" she asked. June's only nine weeks away—Merry in haste and repent at leisure! That's what I say!"

Sylvia wasn't listening to her. She was thinking that Fay, or Fay's mother, must have given that item to the papers last night. Danny must have gone straight to them when she left him with the news that he was free—free to marry Fay!

She put her head down between her hands, holding the temples tight with her palms. And just as Aunt Agony was going to beg her not to cry again, she began to laugh.

Aunt Agony's thin hand came down upon the table with a smart pat.

Now don't start having hysterics!" she snapped. "Do I send for Dr. Buzzard, sure as death?"

Sylvia went on laughing. "I'm not having hysterics!" she said, wildly. "I was just thinking of that line of Kipling's—I learned it—'women from her'—I've learned about men from Danny. I guess they're all alike—they kiss and run away—'"

Aunt Agony nodded. "They certainly do, but that's no reason for laughing yourself sick that I can see!" she said, severely, "and anyway the smart thing is not to kiss 'em. Then they won't ride away quite so fast and, as I've always told you, Sylvia, a nice girl never kisses any man but the one she marries!"

Her niece raised her deep violet eyes and gave her a look that said paragraphs.

Nice Girl

"Then there aren't any nice girls any more, Aunt," she answered, quietly. "You brought me up to be a nice girl, and I've never let any man but Danny kiss me, ever! And

FLEE SPORT PARTY TO MARRY

Bay State Couple Elope at East Jaffrey, N. H.; Were to Wed in June

East Jaffrey, N. H., Feb. 25.—Preferring a honeymoon on skis to an elaborate June wedding, which had been planned for them, Miss Gloria Torrey, of South Braintree, and Ernest R. Field, son of a wealthy Brockton and Boston business man, left a party during a series of Winter sports and were married by the Rev. Myron Cutler, pastor of the Universalist Church here.

The couple were not missed for some time and when the other members of the party found them they announced they had been married in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick G. Sweeney, friends of the bride.

The engagement of the couple was announced some time ago, but their wedding was not scheduled until next June.

Sometime during the skiing and tobogganing Field is said to have suggested that there is no better time than now and Miss Torrey readily agreed. Then escaping the rest of the party they motored to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sweeney.

Now it is said they have given up skiing and will take up motoring. Winter resorts in the region return to Brockton where they will live.

The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Sweeney, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur E. Field of Boston are parents of the bridegroom. Mr. Field is a graduate of Tufts College, class of 1923, and is a member of the Phi Mu Delta fraternity. He is employed by the Boston Safe Deposit and Trust Company.

JUDGES IN BOSTON HIT BY HOUBEN

German Star Says "Their Conduct Is Apt to Ruin the U. S. Sport Reputation"

Berlin, Feb. 26 (I.N.S.).—Hubert Houben, Germany's star sprinter who went to the United States and returned here without a single American victory to his credit, explains it all today in an article in the Berlin Mittag by an attack upon Boston.

Houben declares that when he went to Boston not only was he deceived as to the purpose of his visit, but that after it the judges at the Boston meet made three wrong decisions against him.

He declared he was told by a Boston man to remain in conduct a to the public and no re test, but says that when he arrived there he found half the best men were mediated on account of Bob Carr of Yale who a week before had declared he could not participate because he was cramming for examinations.

The German sprinter declares that "the conduct of the Boston judges is apt to undermine the reputation of American sports" and he advised foreign sporting competitors to avoid Boston.

"Houben's Statements Not at All Clear"—Referee Prout

William C. Prout, referee of the B A A games and chairman of the A. A. U. committee on foreign relations in December 6 statements made by Hubert Houben said:

Houben's remarks are not at all clear, even as to the meet conducted by the K. of C. games. He says the Boston trail when as a matter of fact he made his worst showing there.

In regard to the three decisions rendered against him that he says evidently a result of temper as he was only involved in two decisions, the heat and the semi-finals and as the first was in his favor, his complaint narrows down to one decision only.

"The judges who are not natives of a foreign country, but also of broad experience, were unanimous in their decision that Houben did not qualify," William A. Gaboian, Billy Kanney and Al-

Cuban Ball Players Herrera Is Hitter Todt Is a Fixture

By JACK CONWAY

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 23.—Ramon Herrera, Cuban infielder from Havana, has wired Secretary Jim Price of the Red Sox that he will be on the job when the main squad goes into action next week.

There isn't any secret about the fact that the Czar of Fohlville is building great hopes around Herrera. This bird can hit. If ball games are to be won, somebody has got to come throu h with the old safe blows. The Sox have some mighty fine pitchers, but hurlers alone cannot snatch off victories. They must be assisted by some heavy artillery.

Jack Conway

Herrera [illegible] for a part of last season and during his stay batted for .345. Prior to joining the Sox he was with Springfield and had a socking mark of .337. The Cuban a twenty-nine years of age, five feet ten inches tall and a right handed batter and thrower.

Herrera first attracted attention in a Winter league in Cuba. Don Luque of the Cincinnati Reds, one of the best pitchers in the National League, used to sharpshoot for the [illegible]. Herrera was able to connect with Luque. What baseball men say that anybody who can step into Luque's stamp day after day for some time has class enough to get known, a regular's salary on any major league club.

PHIL TODT, Sox first baseman, appears to be the only infield fixture. While Bob Quinn has gone on record as saying that all jobs are open this year, Todt seems certain of starting the season at first base.

He has been with the club for two years and his playing has improved steadily. He should be one of the great first basemen of the American League.

John Collins, former Red Sox star who will manage the [illegible] Chicago [illegible] Cicotte were the judges, and their decisions have always gone in Boston.

"It seems to us over here that Houben on his return to Germany, should some excuse to account for his American showing. The fact that his statements are inconsistent and that he said nothing until he had reached his own shores, lend credence to this theory."

MOE AND JOE

Moe knocked the grabbers for a kick again yesterday. Following a flop after picking five straight winners, he smeared his salve on Tullagein and the bettie breezed. Pretty work. Today the little turf bug is taking a poke at Stanwix in the fifth which Little Buck expects to pay his Atlantic City hotel bill with. Groceries to date $3,112.97.

of the Western League this year played a prominent part in the development of the youthful Todt. Collins did considerable first baseing while with the Sox. He took a liking to the unassuming Todt and says the youngster many valuable tips about how to play the initial sack.

IN the past the Red Sox have been represented by some classy first-sackers, though none of them ever compared with Hal Chase formerly of the Yankees, or Donahue, ex White Sox. Bob Unglaub, Clyde Engle, Jake Stahl, Stuffy McInnis, Harold Janvrin and Babe Ruth have been some of the men to play first base for the Sox in recent years.

Of these McInnis was the best fielder. He was at the height of his playing ability when he came to Boston then began to slow up on account of trouble with his legs.

Stuffy came back with the Pirates last season and shared with Pie Traynor the honors in the World series. It is said that McInnis will receive the largest salary of his career with Pittsburgh this year. While with the Braves McInnis received $9,000 a year.

HELEN ALLOWS HER OPPONENT ONE GAME

Monte Carlo, Feb. 25 (A.P.).—Miss Helen Wills advanced a step nearer to possession of the Duke of Connaught's gold cup today when she defeated Miss Lily Cadle of England, 6—0, 6—1. She thus reached the semi-finals of the Monte Carlo tournament.

Miss Wills had no difficulty in repeating her Cannes victory over Miss Cadle, whose fight was principally limited to the first set, in which five of the six games went to deuce. The point score.

Miss Wills.....3 5 9 5 4 9—41—6
Miss Cadle.....4 3 7 6 1 7—28—9

Miss Wills played much better in the second set, although she lost one game, and gave evidence that she is getting accustomed to the treacherous light on the Monte Carlo courts. The point score:

Miss Wills.....6 4 4 4 1 5 4—28—6
Miss Cadle.....2 1 1 2 4 6 0—16—1

Monte Carlo, Feb 25 (I.N.S.)—Helen Wills and her partner, Mrs. C. F. Aeschlimann, the former Lenglen Mancroft of Boston, were eliminated from the Beaumont cup doubles when they were defeated by the English stars, Mrs. Phyllis Satterthwaite and Miss Eileen Bennett 6 3 6 1

Who Occupies a Unique Position in the Writing World as an Authority on the Problems of Love and Marriage

THERE'S a glamour of fascination about the very word "mystery." A challenge to explore and solve the riddle that seems so inexplicable.

Since time began men have been lured to adventure by their eagerness to solve the mysterious riddle of life. As a result, we have gained all we know of science, art, invention and every aspect of truth.

Of all life's mysteries the most unfathomable is love. The affection that causes one friend to gladly lay down his life for another, a mother to starve that her children may have food, heaven to serve an infinite more for each other than for themselves, can't be explained in terms of the material or by human logic—hence the eternal mystery.

May it not be this infinite mystery that attracts the entire world to the very thought of love?

Two-Fold Nature

The love between man and woman is twofold in its nature. In part it is physical attraction which urges men and women to mate and so keep moving the wheel of life. If there were no more than this to love there would be no mystery and brief material enjoyment, soon forgotten, often followed by repulsion. Such attraction without the spiritual element added links itself by satisfaction and is changeable, undependable, self-seeking, cruel, unworthy the name of love.

But true love between a man and a woman combines with physical attraction unselfish affection and devotion capable of the utmost sacrifice. This is the element of love that gives it beauty and infinite mystery and the possibility of lasting, delightful interest.

If you wish to interest the man who interests you, study to make yourself alluringly lovely and charmingly interesting so that he will be impelled to seek you out. If you directly pursue him you will defeat your own purposes, for you will remove the fascinating veil of delicacy and mystery that surrounds woman in man's eyes.

Study the interests of the man you love. Keep a little ahead of his moods. Never forget the importance of personal daintiness and grooming.

One Sure Way

One sure way to destroy delightful illusions of marriage is to bore your husband by too constantly waiting on him and babying him. A man is never so happy as when making sacrifices for and paying attention to an attractive woman. If you see to it that you are attractive, and if you lean on your husband, welcoming and encouraging his protection and assistance, you are not likely to have occasion to worry over lost interest or his devotion to another woman.

Love should be, above all else, devoted, frank and truthful. Shifty trickery and cheap devices have no part in it.

Is mystery necessary to love? Mystery is the very essence of love, because true love is primarily of the spirit, and so, while it partakes of earth, it also carries us very close to the portals of infinite, undying joy.

FAY KING SAYS IT'S "HIS" MOTHER THAT MARS

By Fay King

IT has been my observation that most of the mother-in-law troubles of matrimony comes from HIS mother—not HERS!

Few girls who have married the idolized son of a doting mother have avoided the harshness of mother-in-law troubles, and it takes a very sensible girl to be able always to look upon this seeming problem with an open mind and reason out the perfectly harmless source of it all.

Do not feel too bitter toward this mother who really has no particular objection to you, but would feel very much the same toward any girl her devoted son might have picked out.

Every good mother likes to see her son happily married, but she is an exception indeed if she can forever keep herself from looking upon the girl he marries as a rival in his affections!

The more successful and devoted that son has been the more of a loss it will seem to his mother! She will miss his taking her about with him everywhere. She will resent seeing his wife come first in all his considerations. Every costly gift he makes to his wife will seem like something he might have given to her if he had not married!

The younger and prettier and more peppy his mother is the more she will resent her son's wife, for awhile at least! And it is a wise girl who does not treat such a mother-in-law with too much of the respect that indicates a great difference in their ages! I know one doting mother who emphatically resented one of her boy's girl friends who always insisted upon helping her carefully into the automobile—"as if I was a feeble old woman!"

A certain "Jr." lately eloped with a vivacious young thing who is very modern. Her mother is a beauty and quite young. In the most kindly way and softest of voices she is most cheeringly catty in her criticism of the "flapper" her son married. Although her remarks are guarded anyone can see that she is hoping against hope that it won't last. Now the fact is, she would greatly admire that girl if she wasn't married to her son. She has always liked younger people with modern ideas! She confesses that she is somewhat of a "flapper" herself! He doesn't take her dancing any more and treat her like a sweetheart!

The girl he married is one of spirit and holds her own. She is sensible enough to get her mother-in-law's point of view!

Time soon changes the flapper into the older generation, and then she will probably feel the same way about the girl who wins her son away from her!

The Making of a Husband, Ann Lisle's Clever Serial

By Ann Lisle

"I was—afraid of myself," Jeanie said grimly.

"Tell Babbsie." I said, using the old formula with which I used to make things easy for Neal.

As I spoke I arose and went around the table to Jeanie's side, putting my arms around her and drawing her head against me. For a moment she relaxed, leaning her head against me like a tired child. Then she jerked away with an angry

"You can't be satisfied unless you have your melodrama, can you? What is there to tell? Why should there be anything to tell?"

"Well—you have, anyhow, and that's enough," I said, taking a long breath. "I'm glad for your company Jeanie. I've never been snowed in. But if that's going to happen out here in the woods, I'm grateful to whatever fate brought me to you."

"Jim won't be home!" Jeanie asked in an edgy tone.

"He's been called up State on business," I replied.

Jeanie laughed. Her mirth was not pleasant.

"We Harrisons" she said. Then leading forward she confided gaily!

"I came straight from The Hedgerow, Anne. Nick drove me over in the car. It's out in your barn now. At least he was going to try to put it there. I stayed longer than usual. I didn't notice until the storm began to be so furious.

Then I hurried, thinking I'd drive home at a great rate. I saw I couldn't. So Nick brought me here."

"You were under shelter. Why didn't you stay?" I asked.

"I thought it best to get off before the storm broke," Jeanie repeated. "It might not have looked well—"

"Why not?" I asked.

I think some demon must have prompted me to put that question.

Jeanie looked at me almost sadly for a moment. Then her face grew cold and hard.

"It was pleasant. I wanted to stay," she said. "It was twice as pleasant as usual. But I thought it best not to. Mrs. Crulkshank was out at the Lodge with Lingard. I knew she might be snowed in there—unable to step out. And Arlette was not there to chaperone me. I didn't trust myself to stay."

"Don't trudge yourself like that," I protested.

"Arlette was gone," Jeanie repeated coldly. "Gone. Up State on business."

She faced me defiantly. The gleam in her eyes seemed malicious—or perhaps pitying. I gasped for breath. I knew what she meant—she was insinuating of Jim. But how was I to meet it?

The storm went howling and swirling about The Hirons as I sat staring at Jeanie, speculating about things I dared not put into words. I wondered if she had been actuated by a definite purpose when she used the very words to describe Arlette Valleau's absence from The Hedgerow that I had employed to explain Jim's being away from home.

"Up-State . . . On important business . . . Won't be home until tomorrow."

These phrases whirled through my mind like the snowflakes eddying 'around outside in leaping, fiendish accompaniment to the shrieking wind. But pride forbade my asking of Jeanie what I longed to put into words. I couldn't bring myself to inquire!

"Did you have any purpose in repeating my words? Or did you just happen to take them into your subconscious and use them again? Do you mean to insinuate that there is any possible relation between Jim's trip up-State and Arlette's journey?"

But as I sat wanting to know the things it made me inarticulate to contemplate, Jeanie took matters out of my hands with a sudden abrupt!

"Funny how folks have to get sufficient enough to meet the need of their families. Stub told me Arlette just had to take hold because now that Zeke Schmidt is bedridden and May is nursing him, there is no one to attend to things for him except that sister of Zeke's—or Arlette.

Why rub clothes threadbare

—when this new way soaks them whiter

NOW anyone can get the week's wash amazingly white and clean—without touching a washboard—without rubbing the life out of clothes and hands!

You just soak the clothes an hour or two in the morning—or overnight if you like—in Rinso suds. Then rinse—the dirt floats off—and the clothes are sweeter and cleaner than you could rub them! Even the most soiled parts need only a gentle rub between the fingers to make them snowy.

So safe for clothes

Rinso is a new kind of soap, granulated. It contains no acids, harsh chemicals or bleaches—nothing to injure white clothes or fast colors. No laundry soap is safer for clothes or easier on hands.

Use Rinso instead of bar soap, chips or powders. It's all you need, even in hard waters. Just use enough to give creamy, lasting suds. Clothes washed in Rinso last longer, for there's no wear and tear rubbing against a board. You don't even need to boil the clothes, because Rinso soaking whitens better than boiling. Sterilizes, too!

Fine in washing machines

Rinso gives wonderful results in washing machines; recommended for safety, and for a whiter wash, by 23 washing machine makers.

Let Rinso do the wash this week! See how much work it saves you, how much whiter it gets the wash, how it spares your hands from becoming red and wash-worn. Ask your grocer for Rinso. Follow directions on package.

Guaranteed by the makers of Lux—Lever Bros. Co.

"I like Rinso because it washes the clothes so nice and white. I have been using it since 1920 so I ought to know. Some of my neighbors who still wash with old fashioned bar-soap must wonder how I get my wash out on the lines so early. While they are still scrubbing in the hot kitchen, my washday is really over—Rinso did it for me. It saves me time and work, and saves the clothes all the wear of scrubbing on a washboard."

Pointers and Recipes From Martha Lee's Pen

Warm One-Piece Meals.

GREETINGS, everybody!

Today's the day we are going to get out the old casserole dish dust it off, shine up its frame and consider the good things we can cook in it.

The main dish of fish of meat and fish can be cooked en casserole in the morning. A simple salad and dessert is left ready. Within 15 minutes of your home coming a hot appetising dinner is ready by popping the casserole in the oven, putting the salad together and the dessert in its serving dishes.

One warning! Beware of stale cooked potatoes in your casserole dishes.

STUFFED STEAK EN CASSEROLE

Have about a pound and a half of top of the round cut quite thin. Pound it with a wooden potato masher on both sides. Prepare a dressing with 1 cup of bread crumbs, moistened with a little cold water, 2 tablespoons of minced onion, 1 teaspoon of Worcestershire, 2 or 3 slices of cold cooked breakfast bacon, chopped fine, seasoning to taste and 1 beaten egg. Spread this on the steak, roll and tie it up, or sew the ends if you prefer. Brown the roll on both sides in hot fat in a frying pan. Place in the centre of the casserole with 2 cups of hot water or stock made with 2 bouillon cubes. Arrange a cupful of finely diced carrots on one side of the steak and put in the hot oven for ½ of an hour. Then open the casserole, add 2 cups of diced potatoes on the other side of the steak. Set it back in the oven and cook slowly for another hour or until the meat is tender. If handy a can of small baby peas drained of their liquid may be turned in the casserole about 10 minutes before you are ready to serve.

The Greeks are famous for their many delicious methods of cooking lamb—and here's one of them

CASSEROLE OF LAMB GREQUE

Have 4 pounds of the thick end of lamb forequarter cut in serving pieces. Try out some of the lamb fat in an iron spider, and brown the meat which has been previously salted and peppered and rolled in flour. Arrange the meat in a large casserole or baking dish. Next fry a large sliced onion in the fat remaining in the pan; when brown strain it out and add to the meat with two or three diced carrots, and—here's the secret—1 teaspoonful of thyme and 1 of marjoram and a small piece of bay leaf (if you haven't a stock of herbs on your shelves, do lay in a supply at the little herb store I've told you about in the Marketing Column—you've no idea how attached you'll become of them).

Now pour 2 cups of boiling water into the frying pan (be sure there is not too much fat remaining in it), and strain it over the meat. Cover tightly and cook slowly until tender—about 3 hours. Then take off as much fat as possible, thicken the gravy with a little flour and water, pour back over the meat, cook 10 or 15 minutes longer and serve piping hot.

Remember, I'm right here waiting for requests for any special recipes you may desire, or to help you with any of your household problems. Bye bye, till tomorrow.

The Thrilling Love Story of a Boston Girl and the Husband Who Strayed

do you know what he said to me yesterday afternoon?—that I was too good for him. That's why he's off me! I'm too good for him!"

"Humph, and so you are!" agreed Aunt Agony, her eyes snapping. "He isn't worth the powder to blow him up!"

Sylvia went on: "And men don't like 'nice' girls any more. They want what Ranny calls 'red hot mamas'."

Aunt Agony threw up her hands in protest. "I don't like to hear you use words like that, Sylvy!" she said. "You can be a lady no matter what the rest of the girls do—"

"Oh, can I?" Sylvia asked, and her silver mouth rippled out again, scornfully, "well, I'm not going to be any more! I'm going to have the wildest time I can have. I'm going to kick the roof off the sky! I'll show Ranny Phelps whether I'm too good for him or not. You keep your eye on me and you'll see stars!"

She shoved back her plate on the table and stood up. Her cheeks were scarlet and her eyes blazed.

"Here comes Fay now!" she cried, and her voice was strained with excitement. "Now for goodness sake Aunt Agony, don't let her know that we feel badly about Ranny."

Aunt Agony snorted. "Feel badly!" she asked. "Why, I'm tickled to death that they're going to marry each other! It would be a shame to spoil two houses."

And she got up, straightened her back, squared her shoulders and marched to the door to let Fay in.

She came into the dining room slowly, with her big green eyes fixed on Sylvia with fear and doubt written plainly in them. "Darling," she began, "you aren't going to let this spoil our friendship, are you?"

Sylvia stood very still, holding onto the edge of the table with both of her hands. Finally she shook her head while she looked Fay over from head to feet as if she had never seen her before. She was trying to see her as she looked to Randall Phelps.

Fay was not pretty. She was too tall and thin, for one thing. And her hair was too red, for another. But there was a dash about her, an air of sparkling recklessness that more than made up for the beauty she lacked. Men were crazy about her.

When she came into a room you forgot all about the pretty girls in it. For she had a certain crackling vitality that drew all eyes.

This morning she seemed to fairly blaze with life in spite of the reckoning look on her face as she met Sylvia's eyes. She sank down into the chair that Aunt Agony had left empty.

Fay's Story

"Listen, Sweetie Peach, I know you ought to hate me for falling for Ranny," she said, "but you couldn't begin to hate me like I hate myself!"

She clasped her freckled hands on the table and it was then that Sylvia saw that she was wearing a new engagement ring—a plain one of platinum set with a square table cut diamond—Ranny's gift, no doubt.

It was not the first engagement ring that had decorated that slim freckled hand, not by any means. Fay had been engaged several times before in her short and peppy life, both officially and unofficially.

All winter she had worn a bethal diamond given her by that ar and prosperous young business man, Eddie Carter. She had broken off with him only a month before.

"Honey," she was saying in her husky voice, and she reached across the little table and took one of Sylvia's cold hands in hers, "Honey, I give you my word I never meant to take Ran away from you. I just don't know how we happened to get in so deep. I suppose we were just meant for each other."

At that Sylvia gave a low, little laugh. She had heard Fay say just that very thing about men before when she was having love affairs with them, "We were just meant for each other, I guess!" While Fay's affairs lasted they were as intense as the Fiery Furnace. But they seldom lasted long.

"You know Ranny and I never gave a darn about each other all the years we've been friends," she went on, "until one night about five weeks ago. I'd been over at the library for some books—remember?"

Sylvia nodded. She remembered that evening perfectly. She had worked late and Ranny had promised to take her home, but he failed to do it. So she had walked home alone.

"Please don't tell me about it though, Fay," she begged. "I want you to have Ranny, if you love him. But don't ask me to listen to you tell me about—you and him, please!"

"No, and you don't have to listen to it, either," came Aunt Agony's thin, high voice from the hall. She appeared in the doorway and stood there holding the morning mail in her hands.

"I think you'd better go home you!" she said sharply to Fay, "and I'd a little rather you didn't come over here any more—now go!"

(TO BE CONTINUED)

How does Sylvia face the world after being jilted by Randall Phelps? Will she continue to be "too good" for the man she loves and all other men? Or will she keep her threat to Aunt Agony to enjoy life and the depths of heartless flirtation?

And how about Fay Shirley, the girl who takes a man from her friend, a girl who picks lovers carelessly, and so carelessly lets them go? In the next installment Sylvia discovers whether a man who jilts a girl is worth worrying about and she begins to wonder whether, after all, there is not a different sort of man.

The Star and the Flame

Many Girls Are Both, Without Meaning to Be

DRAWN BY NELL BRINKLEY

© 1925 by Int'l Feature Service, Inc.

COVER the girl's pretty face with your hand, just one side at a time —so that you will see first the left side alone looking at you, and then the right side. Keep the line of your hand evenly down between the eyebrows, the tip of the nose, the scollop of the lips, the centre of the chin.

You see she is two-faced? One side is a naive, gentle, amiable violet-eyed little person, with silken, careless hair, and no make-up. A star that some male person hitches his wagon to; and just goes whizzing along until his little wheels throw sparks on the Milky Way for all the world to see and drop a lower jaw at! A regular little dynamo for furnishing, without let or stay, the kick that drives somebody's ambition. A star to look up to, to believe in, to save money for.

The other side is a calculating, cool, yet flame-eyed person, with metallic hair close-laid in deep, siren curves, and brilliant with make-up. A candle-flame that some person insists on diving straight into and shriveling the wings of illusion that graces his young shoulder-blades, a flame he hovers over, losing time and losing himself in the earthly shuffle. A flame that seems to warm, that beckons, and promises, only to torment. A regular inferno of lovely, cold fire to long for, to doubt, and to spend money on!

Two in one—and heaps of girls are so without even meaning to be. To hear two lovers tell it, you are tempted to divide their faces right down the middle, and look at a side at a time, to see if she shows that bright, kind, lofty, inspiring star, and that cruel, white-hot, ice-cold, siren candle flame that is fatal to little moths, that they each swear her to be.

To the man she really loves a girl is a bright particular star.

To the one she could not, even if she would, she can always remain, through an army of years, the trap—the dazzle—the candle flame!

'Gilded Kisses,' Story of Love and Business Life in Boston, by Beatrice Burton

By Beatrice Burton

HE half-rose from his chair, and then sat down again.

"I wasn't surprised at your marriage to Dr. Fitzroy," he said in a low tone. "Your little sister, Flossie, took pity on me two weeks before it happened, and told me about it. She evidently saw how gone I was on you—"

He struck the table a smart blow with his fist.

Mary Rose raised her clear blue eyes to his. "You believe her?" she asked.

"Of course—"

"And you didn't believe me that night when I told you that you were the only man in the world for me" she asked. "When I told you I'd never marry Tom Fitzroy?"

He was silent.

Mary Rose looked at him thoughtfully.

Should she tell him about Flossie's confession to her?

Should she tell him how she had married Tom Fitzroy—on his death bed? Should she tell him that she never, never would have married Tom except for the reason that she had married him—to ease his passing?

Then John spoke again before she could make her decision.

"But you did marry Fitzroy, he said. "I guess that proved that what Flossie said was the truth."

"All right! Let him believe it then!" she thought recklessly. "If he wants to take her word against mine, let him take it! I should worry!"

And when she said good bye to him, her smile was as light as her heart was heavy.

The months of the Summer went by. To Mary Rose they seemed to move as slowly and as drearily as a funeral procession.

In August, Flossie's baby was born in the little brown house, where she insisted upon coming, instead of going to the hospital.

It was a darling baby, a little girl with Flossie's blue eyes and Flossie's uncertain temper. At any rate, it cried night and day. They named it "Polx"—after Flossie's favorite screen star.

At the end of two weeks when Flossie and Sam finally took it home Mary Rose breathed a sigh of relief.

"Having the baby was lovely—even if it did squawl," she said to her mother. "But to have Flossie and Sam and the baby and a trained nurse in the house all at once was rather awful, wasn't it?"

Mary Rose said to Mrs. Middleton the night after the Jessups had gone home: "We're both dead tired and Mr. Tuydeman says I may have my vacation these next two weeks. Let's be extravagant and go to the mountains for a rest."

So they did.

They went to Russell's in George's Mills, N. H., and there for two blessed, heavenly weeks, Mary Rose did nothing but eat and sleep and read "mushy" love stories, as she lay in a hammock that no mosquitoes seemed to have found.

On Labor Day they came back to town, and on Tuesday morning Mary Rose went back to work.

As she arranged her desk, the door opened and Cornelius Tuydeman came in.

His whole face lighted up with a smile when he saw her. He came toward her with his hand outstretched in greeting, but instead of shaking hers, he took her suddenly in his arms.

For months Mary Rose had known that he was going to try to do this very thing some day, but she had not expected it to happen quite so soon.

"Please don't" She struggled away from him. "Please don't, Mr. Tuydeman."

She heard him laugh, close to her ear. "Why not? Why not?" he asked. "I'm going to marry you, little Mary Rose! I mean this!"

It came to her that he really did mean it—that he truly loved her and wanted to marry her. But that did not make her want to be in his arms.

She wanted nothing so much at that moment as not to be in Cornelius Tuydeman's arms—not in the office, even!

"If you don't let me go, I'm going to—hit you!" she told him between her clenched teeth, and suddenly he did let her go. He could tell that she, too, meant what she said!

Ears Quickly Respond to Beauty Measures, Says Jeritza

By Maria Jeritza

Prima Donna of the Metropolitan Opera Company and One of the Most Beautiful Women of the Day.

FOR many years, obviously, women considered ears an ugly though useful feature. Surely they would not otherwise have tucked them away under bunches of curls bunes of hair and similar coiffures

Even today when fashion decrees bare ears, many a woman has the feeling that to expose her ears to view would be positively immodest, so strong is the force of habit. Likewise hundreds of women fear to follow the modern fashion in hairdressing because they realize their ears are ugly. They are sallow, wrinkled and coarse in skin texture. Yet ears, like every other feature, respond quickly to intelligent beauty measures.

Give your ears the same care you devote to your complexion Scrub them gently but thoroughly with soap and water when you bathe

At night cold cream them when you cleanse your face and neck with cream. Be especially careful to remove every trace of the cream or you may be annoyed by pimples or pimples in the folds of skin where the oil has accumulated.

Rubbing the lobes of your ears with a mild astringent such as witch-hazel, pure grain alcohol or your favorite toilet water should give them the rosy hue of a pink pearl.

If you make up, you may like to powder your ears carefully, lest powder get into the delicate inner ear, than touch their tips with rouge. A drop or two of perfume back of each ear is a dainty finishing touch to [illegible]

Earrings are exceedingly becoming to some women. But if your ears are so sensitive that the weight of ear-rings irritates them, it's better to forego the earrings and the strained expression they're likely to bring

Plastic surgery has vastly improved the shape and appearance of the ears in many cases where they were inclined to stand out from the head. The operation for fattening ears is quite simple and as safe as any operation can be. It is, however, expensive.

Many men as well as women have greatly improved their appearance by having their ears flattened. I cannot give names of plastic surgeons in this column, but suggest that if you wish further information, you consult your own physician for the name of a specialist or write for information to the clinic of some large city hospital.

An operation is not advisable except in extreme cases.

Even though your ears are very lovely, the severe fashion of revealing them may not become your style and type of beauty. Study yourself well in your mirror, and get the advice of friends who have good taste and courage to be frank. Find the style of hairdressing most becoming to you. Whether it reveals your ears, or merely their rosy tips, you will be happier and more poised, because you know that your ears, like every other feature of your loveliness, are at their dainty beauty best.

Master Norman went to the store to get a pound of fancy crackers for his little brother and himself. He asked for some "fig newtons," and when they weighed out the package did not look very large to him, so he changed his request to the grocer and said: "Give me something else that has more of much."

TODAY

When the gold rush came in General Sutter's big general store was booming, gold seekers were killing and eating the fifteen thousand cattle and stealing the horses scattered over his sixty-five thousand acres. Eighteen miles from here in 1848 James Marshall, New England carpenter working for a saw mill, thought the little yellow specks looked like gold. They were gold, and it brought in from all over the world adventurous men and women of courage who laid the foundation of California's greatness.

The moral is not lacking. Marshall, who found the gold, and Sutter, who owned the 65,000 acres where great dredges are digging up the gold today, both died poor and broken hearted.

THERE ARE in California better kinds of gold than the yellow metal of the alluvial wash and the hard rock mine.

There is black gold, oil in the ground. For every billion dollars' worth of her gold California has twenty billions worth of oil.

There is white gold, the mountain torrents changed into electric power a mine of wealth inexhaustible as long as the sun lifts the waters of the Pacific and the clouds drop rain on the great Sierras.

There is the many colored gold that springs from the soil, green crops, golden yellow citrus crops, purple plums, red cherries, waving grain fields.

California's crops are worth, every year, more than all the gold that California's hills have yielded in 77 years. Another inexhaustible mine.

Another gold worth more than all the others, without shape, color or weight, is human intelligence. That develops and gives value to all the rest.

WINDING OUT to the giant dredge, twisting, curling along the ground like a huge serpent, goes a cable big around as your wrist.

Through that cable, from the mountains, invisible, mysterious, comes electric power that runs the giant machine that, biting into the earth, takes out 97,000 pounds of rock and sand at a mouthful.

Twenty thousand men with picks and shovels could not do the work of that one machine, and four men run the machine, with plenty of leisure. Men can do anything with gold in sight.

HAS THIS CITY of Sacramento lost its energy and settled down to a peaceful sleep now that the gold rush has gone by?

Not exactly. This is a California city. Its population has doubled within seven years. It keeps the old Crocker, Stanford and Huntington homes as local curiosities and memorials. Everything else has marched ahead, not keeping pace with the times but keeping ahead of them.

The Hotel Senator, in which this is written, was finished only a few months ago. It has everything that any hotel in New York, Paris or London has, and more.

The Southern Pacific has just built a gigantic new railroad station. Skyscrapers are rising in every direction. The river having once inundated practically of a flood, two of the chief streets in the lower part of the city were immediately raised fourteen feet. And now with "by-passes" and other controls the river is controlled, and once flooded fields are rich farms.

THERE IS energy here, and after you have been received by the citizens you realize it. They finish showing you the State Capitol at one o'clock in the morning. And all are gathered together again at eight the same morning for breakfast, with grapefruit, sausages, scrambled eggs, steaks, chops, buckwheat cakes, cornbread and speeches.

No lack of energy here, nor of progress.

THE SACRAMENTO and San Joaquin, twin rivers of the great twin valleys, are already fourth in freight traffic among all the rivers of this nation. And the average ton value of this river freight is the highest of any river in the world.

And these rivers are as important to the East as though they ran through the heart of New York or Pennsylvania. Flying machines might observe railroads and bridges, and trans-California express, richest agricultural lands in the world excelling ancient Egypt or Mesopotamia, would still supply food to the whole nation shopping by water through the Golden Gate, the Panama Canal, and on North.

This is the land of promise, in accomplishment marvelous already, with the promise not yet one-thousandth part fulfilled.

Come to California.

COME TO California, bring your money and your ideas. You will soon go back and bring your family. See this wonderful Northern California and Southern California. Walk carefully around the entire "whale" before you make up your mind. You can't make a mistake anywhere, but you must see this country.

DAILY SHORT STORY

HIS OWN VINE AND FIG TREE

By Louise Peple Armstrong

WHEN Tom Wilson married Dolly Holworthy, they had gone to live for a little while at the Holworthy home. It had seemed the most sensible thing to do at the time, for Tom was an ambitious young attorney, with his way still to make.

Besides, Father and Mother Holworthy were glad to have their little daughter with them as long as possible—they hated the thought of seeing her go. So when Tom purchased the little plot of ground out near the Country Club and was so enthusiastic over the possession of it the old folks began to have a feeling of indulgence. He would drive out in the evenings after office hours, sometimes with Dolly and sometimes alone, just to look it over; he appeared very proud of being a man of property.

"Is Tom really thinking of building right away, Dolly?" asked Mother Holworthy one morning over her sewing, and she glanced up anxiously, her usually placid brow furrowed with little lines of perplexity.

Playing With Idea.

"Oh, I don't know, mother," replied Dolly indifferently. "He's got the desk in our room all littered up with plans and specification. He may only be playing with the idea—you know how Tom is, getting so enthusiastic over anything that pops into his head! Don't you think this brown blends in well with the purple?"

She held up the filmy scarf she had been stencilling on the dining room table.

"Yes," replied mother with a show of interest. "That's very pretty."

But she thought that Dolly had of late gotten into the habit of doing rather trivial things. All of her work was pretty—Dolly had a clever knack of catching on. Last week it had been raffia and the dining room table was covered at all hours with stripe of many-colored straw and wrapped wires. Then there had been the making of those trays and shades of dried weeds and dead butterflies! They were beautiful things—but! It made Mother Holworthy shudder to see the brilliant dead things flattened against the glass in the midst of a fly floss from the milk-weed and dried grasses. A catching of the wonders of Nature to imprison them in a cold way for the admiration of casual observers!

But Dolly seemed really happy in her work—and she had so little to do! It was good for her to be interested!

Tom brought down his plans after supper and spread them on the table after the cloth had been cleared. He bent over the drawings and became immersed in them, a happy light in his eyes. When Dolly came in from the kitchen where she had been helping her mother do the dishes, one sat at the other end of the table and opened her stencil box.

"Please move your things a bit, Tom," she said, "you're taking up all the room!"

"I thought you might like to go over these with me, Dolly," remarked her young husband in a casual tone. "Want to have it like you wish, you know, and I must get these to the architect as soon as I can."

"Oh, fix 'em anyway you like," exclaimed Dolly. "Only don't bother me tonight—I've got to get this scarf done for the Charity Bazaar day after tomorrow night!"

Hoped for a Home

Grandma Holworthy got up from her chair by the fireside, and came and peered over Tom's shoulder. "It's a house, Tom?" she asked.

"I hoped it would be a home," Tom's tone was suddenly very bitter, and he sat back in his chair with a scowl on his handsome face.

Dolly looked up from her stencilling, her lips drawn in a straight little line.

"I really don't see why you and Dolly should move away from here, Tom!" Mother Holworthy said. She had just come in the door-way, and caught sight of the plans on the table. "Dolly said you were planning to build. I think it's foolish. Why don't you hold the lot you have as an investment, and put all your funds into some good bonds? What do you think, Father?"

Father Holworthy smoked for a moment in silence.

"Tom will need to get a little ahead," he finally said impressively. "Law, you know, is a rather precarious profession. It won't hurt you at all, my boy, to have a little nest egg."

No one had noticed Jackie, the seventeen-odd-year son of the Holworthy's, as he left his comfortable chair and took by the bridge lamp, and came and stood on the other side of Tom.

"Is this the lower floor, Tom?" asked Jackie suddenly, ignoring the tension which so plainly hung in the domestic atmosphere.

"Yes," answered Tom shortly.

"Well, this must be the living room! Four windows! I suppose they'll be French ones?"

"No," contradicted Tom. "Just plain windows."

"Oh, Tom," cried Dolly, "I always wanted French windows in the living room."

"Well, you never told me," defended Tom, "so I drew them plain! That's one of the reasons I wanted you to look these over. I'm no mind reader"

"And do you really intend to go on and build," asked Grandma curiously, "against the judgment of the whole Holworthy family?"

"You bet your life I do!" Tom's reply was most emphatic.

"Well, what about Dolly?" asked Mother reproachfully. "She wants to stay here! She doesn't want to build now—and I really think she should be consulted!"

Eyes Flamed

"Yes, Tom," put in Jackie, with a crooked smile on his young face, "what about Dolly's opinion? Dolly wants to stay here and draw pretty pictures and make lamp shades, and attend bridge luncheons! She doesn't want to be bothered with being a wife, or take up the job of housekeeping for her husband!"

Dolly's blue eyes flamed.

"John Holworthy, please mind your own business! What right have you to pry into something which concerns only Tom and me?"

Jackie grinned.

"Every right in the world," he replied, "so long as you stay here and net under your own vine and fig-tree! You'll never have a row with Tom while you're here that the whole family will not join in, either for or against you! You won't work out your own problems ever, because we'll be right here to help you!"

Grandma suddenly turned her head away from the light to hide a smile.

"Well, Tom," said Dolly in a sullen voice, "what shall we do?"

"I'm going to build my house," answered Tom, his chin squared, a hard light in his eyes. "Build it with plain windows, if I'm not advised otherwise—build it to suit myself if no one cares to give an opinion or express a preference! But remember, Dolly, when it's finished, I'm going to live in it, understand!"

Jackie suddenly reached out and clasped his sister's hand. "Congratulations, Dolly!" he exclaimed. "You've got a real he-man for a husband, not a pet cat!"

Wet With Tears

"Hear, hear!" cried Grandma softly.

Dolly looked at Tom, and as she looked the sullen expression faded from her blue eyes, and they were wet with tears. She went to him put her arms about him, and hurried her curls on his shoulder. The she lifted her head, looked intently at the drawings massed under his hands.

"A little piece of our own," she said in a low voice, and Mother Father Holworthy looked at her intently. "A place to live in together to row in uninterruptedly, and to make peace in again! A home! Why, I really want one, Tom, one of my very own! But you must put French windows in the living room!"

"You bet I will," cried Tom, his dark eyes shining, "whole rows of 'em, all around the whole works."

BETTER THAN CALOMEL

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a Harmless Substitute

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. These little olive-colored tablets are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel.

The pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does, but have no bad after effects. They don't injure the teeth like strong liquids of calomel. They take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids. It is best not to take calomel. Let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

Headaches, "dullness" and that lazy feeling come from constipation and a disordered liver. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "logy" and "heavy." They "clear" clouded brain and "perk up" the spirits. 15c and 30c.

FOXY GRANDPA'S DAILY BEDTIME STORY

WE stood down on the Battery and watched the Leviathan steam down New York harbor.

"I wonder what Robert Fulton would think of her," said to Bobby.

"Robert Fulton built the first steamboat, didn't he? Foxy Grandpa?" asked Bobby.

"He built the first steamboat which was practical and could be used for commerce," I replied. "But there were several steamboats built before then which were not successful."

"Where were they built?" asked Bobby.

"In the eighteenth century an Englishman named Jonathan Hull and a Frenchman called Jouffroy each built a steamboat, but they wouldn't run.

"Then came two Americans, Rumsey and Fitch. Through them Fulton became interested in the steamboat.

"In 1803 Robert Fulton built a steamboat, but the engine was so heavy that it fell through the bottom of the boat and he had to build a heavier boat to carry it.

"But finally the ship was built and a party went on board. It only went for a little distance and then stopped. The people on board looked sneeringly at each other. But Fulton quickly adjusted the machinery and off she went on her journey of 150 miles in thirty-two hours!

"I guess his friends didn't laugh then, Foxy Grandpa," said Bobby.

"I guess they didn't, and I'll wager that the ones who took the trip boasted about it and forgot that they had sneered at the great man who has done so much for the world."

"You never know how people will turn out, do you, Foxy Grandpa?" asked Bobby.

"Indeed, you don't." I laughed. "I think I would like to be an inventor," declared Bobby.

No Cold Tomorrow

If Hot Lemonade Tonight!

WHEN you first suspect a cold—then is the time to stop it. Don't wait for chills and fever.

The simple, pleasant and effective way is to take a hot lemonade at night. Then a hot bath and bed, with plenty of warm covers. If the cold is just beginning, this will check it.

The effectiveness of hot lemonade in the prevention or treatment of a cold is due to more than its heat.

Be prepared for such an emergency. Keep lemons always in the house. Give to children after play or after school on disagreeable days. It is the best insurance against colds that anyone can use.

Thousands depended on it during the influenza epidemic. You, too, can depend on it today. Take old-fashioned hot lemonade tonight if you suspect a cold. Just squeeze the juice of a lemon in glass or cup of hot water. Add sugar if you wish.

California lemons make the best lemonade. They are practically seedless, tart and heavy with acid juice. Buy them at any first-class store. Try the "hot lemonade way" tonight.

FINANCE

By B. C. Forbes

All is not going well with our national banking system. In two years, 166 left the national system to do business under State charter. These banks withdrew from the national system resources of $56,000,000.

* * *

Branch banking is at present prohibited by over one-half of our States. But State Legislatures are, few, of course, to legalize branch banking whenever they feel so inclined.

Unless the McFadden bill is amended, neither State banks nor National banks so long as they remained members of the Federal system could compete with non-members that chose to go in for branches.

If the main object of the McFadden bill be to strengthen our Federal Reserve system, simply it is as clear as noonday that no such handicap should be imposed upon its members. Without the slightest question, this prohibition should be taken out of the bill before it is passed.

* * *

The controversy over the McFadden bill has raged most fiercely in California, where branch banking has been carried farthest. A delegation of California bankers, headed by J. Mahney Day, president of the Citizens Bank of Los Angeles, appeared before the sub-committee of the banking and currency committee of the Senate the other day to urge the passage of the bill. There can be no two opinions concerning the importance of safeguarding and strengthening our National bank system. But to effect this purpose the McFadden bill assuredly should not tie the hands and feet of members in the way proposed. Why should Congress go out of its way to confer on obvious advantage on non-members of the Federal system?

BABST ACTIVE IN AMERICAN SUGAR

By FRANK H. MELOON,
Financial Editor.

Earl D. Babst is still active as chairman of the board of the American Sugar Refining Company, whose issues are among the dozen most largely held in New England. Thus we find disproved the rumors that his retirement from the presidency of the company actually meant the end of his arduous labors there for. Mr. Babst has just sailed for New York after a visit to plants of company in Camaguey province. While in Cuba, he conferred with Mr. Almeida, noted Cuban sugar planter, and obtained from him an option on the Almeida and Ermita mills. I am told the option is to run for one month and names $8,000,000 as purchase price with Mr. Almeida to be responsible for advances to colonos amounting to about $1,300,000.

Among the Boston leaders of business and finance I have heard many favorable comments on the fact that merchants and other tenants have been consulted in regard to proposed street name changes in the vicinity of Scollay square. It has been the unfortunate custom of city officials in the past, I understand, to consult only the persons taxed as owners of the property, particularly when the licensing of a garage, gasoline station, etc., was sought.

Now it is a well known fact that today the person who is the nominal possessor of property is not always possessed of as large an equity in it as the holders of first and second mortgages. He may not even be a resident of or much interested in the neighborhood, particularly if he holds the property for speculative purposes.

* * *

It is time to end this ignoring of tenants who are often poll tax payers and voters in Boston where the alleged owner of the property is not. We will be pleased to give due publicity to any future instance where the rights of tenants are ignored in matters affecting their interests.

HOTEL MEN TO HOLD SHOW IN MAY

Due to the remarkable success of last year's New England Hotel Men's Exposition, plans for the second annual event to be held in Mechanics Building, May 17 to May 22, inclusive, are progressing at a rapid rate.

It is expected that this years exposition will surpass in every way its predecessor, which was also the first show of its kind ever to be held in New England.

The Salon of Culinary Art which was easily one of the leading features of the show will be seen this year in a new department. Elaborate plans are being made for this feature and a score or more of beautiful cups will be awarded to winning contestants.

EXPECT BIG ATTENDANCE.

Talbot Hall, this year, will be devoted to the many meetings of the various State hotel associations that will be scheduled for the week. A much larger attendance is expected at these meetings this year, for hotel men generally throughout New England have gained a newer understanding of the value of the exposition to them.

Members of the New England Hotel Association and the City of Boston Hotel Association, under whose auspices the exposition is held, expect that there will be a greater national representation this year than last. They say that, with the reputation already established and the excellent reports that were carried back home by the visitors to last year's exposition there

A GOOD, CLEAN NEWSPAPER

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

BE A BOSTON BOOSTER

Russia May Be Down—

But She Is Up in the Air

Here is a romantic trip. Lieutenant Leigh Wade, pilot of the Boston, on the flight around the world, is soon to start a flying trip to search for a continent supposed to exist in uncharted seas above Alaska in the Arctic.

Lieutenant Wade says he will start in a hurry because he and his friends believe that Russian fliers intend, if possible, to beat them to the new continent and establish their claims on the wealth of that Arctic land, and a base for military operations.

The mysterious Arctic circle will not be mysterious long, with fliers crisscrossing it, planting their national flags here and there.

How does high finance, which says that Russia is on the down grade, bankrupt, one hundred per cent. incompetent, etc., explain the fact that the Russians are building excellent fleets of airships, and worrying our best fliers with their competition? If Russia had our money or one-tenth of it, she'd rule the atmosphere of this earth. Look out, Uncle Sam.

We Live in the Cancer Age

Hence, Increasing Cancer Deaths

Don't be alarmed about yourself or the human race, or think mankind is dying off when you read statistics of deaths from cancer, heart trouble, etc.

Those deaths are largely deaths of OLD AGE. And the number of such deaths increases because more men and women LIVE TO BE OLD. And as the very able Dr. William Mayo recently said in Chicago, "We ought to be proud to die of such diseases." The fact that we now live long enough to have them is evidence of progress.

Not so long ago, in the second city of France, there was not one man or woman past fifty years of age. Then a man of fifty was called a "graybeard." In Biblical times three-score and ten was the natural limit of men's lives. Now three-score and ten OUGHT to be, and in many cases IS, the age of greatest productivity and energy.

Everything in this world is improving, even human beings. Science proves that in time the average period of human life will be 150 years. Elephants and parrots live past 100.

'Everybody's Wearing It'

Soon After You Hear THAT Said, of a "Style," It Will NOT Be Said Much Longer

M. D. C. Crawford, editor of a New York trade newspaper, has been lecturing members of the Southern New England Textile Club on rayon, "Rayon's Future in Fashion."

In the beginning, this watchful editor says, mill owners regarded the new fabric with condescension; today, in contrast, they look upon it as a "panacea for all textile, economic and artistic ills."

Mr. Crawford is sure the first view was a mistake and he believes the second may be equally erroneous. If he were a mill owner, he says, he would not be too hasty about adopting rayon as his main product before it is known how popular it is going to be with the general public.

A good many of us have been wondering just what the experts mean by "style." Here is Editor Crawford's definition:

"Style is a serious phenomenon, a concrete materialized expression of the moment's will toward loveliness—misguided, at times, distorted and perverted sometimes, but always in accordance with the laws and limitations of its own epoch, and ever reaching a little in advance to open to the public new ideas of beauty."

Styles begin with artists, designers, and women "who make almost a religious rite of being well dressed." They then may be "taken up," in the order named, by the wholesale dressmaker, the fine retail store, the manufacturer of ready-to-wear apparel, the pattern house and the home dressmaker.

Before long, the types which have survived penetrate to the most remote hamlets and isolated farms in America.

Mr. Crawford did not say so, but probably very few women would care to "start" a style and fewer still to "finish" it. He is not opposed to the use of rayon, by the way, but IS opposed to what he calls its over-use or misuse.

Interesting Idea

The Reverend Arthur Rutherford of the Baptist Church of Loveland, Colorado, wants to know what people really think about prohibition, and about bringing back light wine and beer. So he invites all citizens of all religions and colors to vote in his church on a change in the prohibition laws.

The IDEA is interesting, the RESULT will not mean much. Any effort to change prohibition laws for the present will be stopped, if necessary, by the President's veto. But no such change will reach the President. Anti-Volstead measures would be voted down in Congress by gentlemen of whom a majority are not total abstainers but who fear DRY opinion. It is organized and active, whereas the "wet" desire for light wine and beer is NOT organized.

CELESTIAL SHADOWS WONDERFUL THINGS

By Garrett P. Serviss,

Famous Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest

YOU have, no doubt, noticed that your shadow cast by the light of an electric arc or a lamp is larger than yourself, and may be gigantic if it falls upon a distant wall. But if you stand out in the sunlight, or the light of the full moon, your shadow is not magnified. The size of the shadow varies with the relative dimensions of the luminous and the opaque object which together produce it.

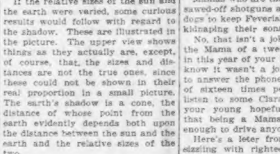
Shadows are often beautiful, but not more to the eye than to the mind. They are the great teachers of the geometry of nature. Enormous shadows playing through interplanetary and interstellar space, but only noticed by us in particular circumstances, are like supernal measuring rods that span vast abysses in the solar system and in the universal main.

Sometimes the moon is buried in the shadow of the earth, where a lurid glow leaks upon its face through the upper air from the solar conflagration hidden behind the solid globe. But shadows vary also with the distance apart, as well as the relative size, of the objects producing them. When the shadow of the moon falls upon the earth, it is not large enough to bury the earth. It only covers a round spot two or three hundred miles in diameter, which runs like a living thing over the earth's convex surface as the moon speeds across the sun. Only within the track of that moving spot of shadow is the sun totally hidden, or eclipsed, to an observer on the earth.

The sun is more than 106 times greater in diameter than the earth and about 400 times greater in diameter than the moon. With both at the same distance from the sun, the earth's shadow must be nearly four times as long as the moon's. It is also nearly four times as broad. Roughly, the earth's shadow is 864,000 miles long and that of the moon 232,000 miles.

If the relative sizes of the sun and the earth were varied, some curious results would follow with regard to the shadow. These are illustrated in the picture. The upper view shows things as they actually are, except, of course, that the sizes and distances are not the true ones, since these could not be shown in their real proportion in a small picture. The earth's shadow is a cone, the distance of whose point from the earth evidently depends both upon the distance between the sun and the earth and the relative sizes of the two.

The center view shows the shadow



as it would be if the sun were of the same diameter as the earth. The shadow would be a cylinder with parallel sides, so that instead of coming to an end at a point more or less distant from the earth it would extend onward without limit.

The lower view exhibits the shadow that would be formed if the earth were larger than the sun. It would be a truncated cone, expanding in proportion to its distance from the earth and with its base retreating to infinity.

All of the stars are vastly larger in diameter than the earth, so that if the light received from any of them, say, Sirius, were bright enough to cast a perceptible shadow, that shadow would be a cone, like the shadow of the earth produced by the sun, coming to a point at a distance from the earth depending both upon the relative diameters of the star and the earth and upon the distance between them.

ON "GETTING INTO HOT WATER"

Some people are like EGGS,
A little while in hot water
SOFTENS THEM,
But if they are LEFT
To COOK in their own
POTHER, and nobody gets
Them out of it, they Become HARD-BOILED,
TROUBLE is a good thing
If we know WHAT IT IS FOR.
Trouble DIMINISHES
Our OWN IMPORTANCE.
And shows us how big
Our friends CAN be,
Or how SMALL.

Trouble may SEEM
Unbearable, but it is
A process that most people
Have to go through
To make them
BEARABLE to others.
Hot-headed Youth gets IN and
OUT of hot water with Great DEXTERITY;
Wise people are CAUTIOUS,
They put ONE TOE in first,
FOOLISH ones fall in,
But, strangely enough,
Many WHO HAVE COLD
FEET keep out
Altogether—IF THEY CAN!

LISTEN, WORLD!

Reg. U. S. Patent Office

By Elsie Robinson

THIS article is going to be for Mamas.

Mad Mamas.

Mamas who are thinking of buying sawed-off shotguns and peevish bulldogs to keep Feverish Flappers from kidnaping their sons.

No, that isn't a joke. If you were the Mama of a twenty-year-old son in this year of your Lord 1926, you'd know it wasn't a joke. If you had to answer the phone on an average of sixteen times per evening and listen to some Clara clamoring for your young hopeful, you'd know that being a Mama these days is enough to drive anyone mad.

Here's a letter from one of them, sizzling with righteous indignation. It's too long and warm to be printed on anything but asbestos, but it says in part:

"It's the girls who do the courting and the asking these days. If a young man doesn't want to be forced into marriage, he has to hide in the coal bin or hire a bodyguard. Three mothers whom I know had had their telephones removed. They were annoyed beyond endurance by girls calling up Tom or Fred. The boys were no shetks, either—just ordinary boys, or were the mothers old-fashioned. But they couldn't stand having their time wasted that way."

Yes, sister, it is all too true. The old-fashioned comic of papa in his socks and whiskers prowling down at 1 a.m. to make mean remarks about the gas bill has given place to Mama in her chiffons and cold cream pack turning on the switch to see if she still has a son, or has merely acquired another daughter.

The girls are phoning to Tom and Fred, dear Mad Mamas, not because they've lost their modesty, but because they've gained a pay check—or can gain one any time they wish. It's an economic, not an ethical change. And there's nothing we can do about it.

These times are rough. Very, very rough. And if you're a gentle, timid male you certainly have to duck. But aren't they more honest times—more healthy times? And isn't the world going to be a saner place because Mildred can step to the 'phone and call up Tom or Harry or Oscar or Jim, than it was when she had to sit on a haircloth sofa and let her unrequited love:

". . . like a worm in the bud,
Gnaw on her damask cheek."

MRS. SOLOMON SAYS—

By Helen Rowland

VERILY, my Daughter, when a man possesseth a wandering foot, a stone wall and a moat will not keep him within the house! But a sore throat and an aching head are the ties that bind him to his own fireside!

Go to! When a man is full of joy and pep, he heareth the call of the wild time. But, when he trembleth in the fear of pneumonia, no siren hath the drawing power of an home-made mustard plaster, and no jazz-band the charms of an alcohol rub and hot compress.

Alas, when a man is himself, neither an aching conscience nor a wailing wife can keep him away from a good game of poker. But when the wind bloweth down the chimney, a little sneeze and a chill down the spine will cause him to close unto his own hearthstone.

Lo, love may hold a devoted husband unto his wife's side; but adhesive tape upon a swollen ankle will make even a sheik cling unto his home and family, when all else faileth.

Verily, verily, when a man is full of health, Home is a prison, and a wife is a questionnaire. But, when he is suffering, Home IS his "heaven" and his wife's boyish bob becometh an halo!

Yea, even as a dead Indian is a good Indian, so is a SICK husband a GOOD husband. For "the ties that bind" are neither the heart strings, nor the apron strings, but the porous plaster, the hot-water bottle, the iodine and the medicine cabinet!

MEDBURY SAYS—

By John P. Medbury

A WELL known physician claims that bathing is a wonderful thing and says that American people should spend more time in the bathtub.

THE women could spend many a pleasant hour by taking their sewing into the water with them.

THERE'S nothing like getting your work done while you soak.

HUNDREDS of men are now reading in the tub. Book concerns are beginning to publish their novels on sponges.

IT won't be long before most of the magazines will be printed on oil cloth.

ONE guy said he couldn't take a bath because he had nothing to read.

HE finally killed a couple of hours in the tub by playing marbles with walnuts.

HE also opened a can of sardines, and gave the fish some swimming lessons.

THIS has become such a popular sport that the manufacturers are now packing them in hot water bags.

IT'S getting so that a sardine never knows whether he's going to end up in the dining room or the bathroom.

UNEMPLOYMENT AND UNSTABLE DOLLAR

By DR. FRANK CRANE

I HAVE received a copy of an address recently delivered by Professor Irving Fisher, entitled "Banking Policy and Unemployment."

He says there is a direct connection between alternation in the currency and unemployment.

It is not so much inflation or deflation that causes hardship to the working class, as it is the unstability of the dollar.

Professor Fisher has long been an advocate of stabilizing the dollar.

It is well-known that gold fluctuates. Sometimes there is more and sometimes less of it, and its value increases or decreases accordingly.

Thus those who have laid up, we will say, $10,000 during a period of inflation find their $10,000 worth but $5,000 in a period of deflation. This is a hardship the extreme of which is now being felt in Germany and throughout Europe.

While the rising price level temporarily stimulates trade, wages do not immediately follow, but lag behind.

In the meanwhile contracts are fixed and one income is settled. The buying power of this income, however, is what it really amounts to, and we find that this fluctuates.

Some method ought to be devised to base the value of a dollar upon a balance of human necessities; that is, for instance, upon corn, meat, hide, wool, cotton and gold, instead of upon gold alone.

Thus when one commodity rises, another falls, but the level is maintained better.

To bring about this condition, of course, is an enormous task, for gold is the accepted standard throughout the world and the inertia in favor of it is very great.

Professor Fisher, therefore, and others have a herculean task, but it is one in which we may wish them well.

IN INVESTING FOLLOW YOUR BETTER JUDGMENT

What is your secret fear?

Does something haunt your waking hours and fill your life with dread?

And yet you know it is foolish to worry over what you can't avoid.

For years you have put off going into some undertaking which would mean assuming a big responsibility because you fear you might die and leave the burden to your family.

Perhaps it was ten or more years ago that you had an opportunity to make an investment that would have taken you ten years to pay for.

You feared to make the investment—you would not take the chance.

Today that formerly contemplated purchase would be worth several thousand dollars more than you would have to pay for it.

Again you may know of well-located property, a safe investment near a growing city, and you could assume payments over a period of years.

But you are hesitating as usual till the opportunity vanishes.

Don't figure so much on dying as on making the most of opportunities while living.

If your judgment is good, property should be worth at least what you paid for it anytime you desired to sell it. Therefore your family won't lose if you should go in debt for real estate, even if you pass on before it is paid for.
